editor's view

Why Vote in an Alumni Election

Or maybe the question should be "Why have an election at all?" The Association's constitution insists on elections, but constitutions, as we all know, can be changed. After all, it costs us a zillion dollars to mail each issue out and we don't get all that many ballots returned, so why not just save the paper or print something else. Some university alumni associations just appoint a board without bothering with an election at all.

Here's what we do now: every year our nomination committee selects a slate to fill the number of available positions. This slate is made up of grads whose careers, volunteer experiences and interest in UBC suggest they would be good board members. Most years, this slate is elected by acclamation, since no one else puts their name forward. In some years, like this one, other nominations come in and we hold an election. If we get a very few ballots, perhaps we should consider an appointed board and forget about elections. What do you think?

The Alumni Association has been active since 1917 serving the interests of grads and the university. That long history has been both productive and valuable to UBC's development. Some of our volunteers have been or became VIPs in this province: Sherwood Lett, John Oliver, Arthur Laing, Bill Gibson, Nathan Nemetz, George Morfitt, Charlotte Warren, Deborah Sing, Martin Glynn and Haig Farris, to name a few, have all served as president of this Association. As volunteers, they have had an influence on the direction this university has taken over the years, and have actively designed the kinds of programs we offer you. And they have worked hard.

The short answer to the question heading this column is, "because it matters." It's one way you can participate in the Association's (and the university's) business, and your vote will directly affect how this Association operates. You may not know any of the candidates presenting themselves for election. How, you might wonder, can you make an informed decision.

We provide some information about each candidate; where he or she works, what he or she has done in the community, and how he or she feels about the job they're seeking. How do you think their experience will help this Association operate, and how will that experience help them operate as a team? Read over the information on each candidate, and, based on that information, vote for the people you think would do the best job.

Maybe things will change in the future. Maybe we'll decide not to have elections anymore. But this year we have one. Exercise your right and cast your vote. Your Association will be the better for it.

Toronto

Above, Ed Ng BCom '94, Toronto branch president, & Marion Petelycky BSc '85 preside over the lucky prize draw at the Toronto reception, Nov. 30.

Since our inception as a society in 1917, the focus of the Alumni Association has been the well-being of UBC. From our involvement in the Great Trek in 1922 through our work in the "Back Mac" campaign in the 1960s to our support of the World of Opportunity campaign in the early 1990s, successive Association boards have pledged time, resources and commitment to the goals of the university.

It's no different today. When Martha Piper brought down her vision of UBC's future in "TREK 2000," we went to work to integrate that vision into our day-to-day planning. All our programs, from this magazine to our reunion and branch work, have been scrutinized and adjusted to ensure that our goals and those of the university are in complete harmony.

- Call to all Canadian alumni! You are needed for events, development & mentoring for the India branch. Contact Nitin Jain at jainitin66@hotmail.com or 462-8877.

Our renewed commitment to branch development is a good example of this integration. "Internationalization" is one of the main tenets of TREK 2000. UBC's goal is to educate our students in a global context, and to attract more students, faculty and academic relationships from the international community. In response to this, we have expanded our branches program by devoting full-time staff position to developing close links with our far-flung alumni, and to creating opportunities for interaction between alumni, university members and students abroad.

Another of TREK 2000's goals is to increase community involvement in the university. We have expanded our A<sup>card</sup> to offer no-cost borrowing privileges at UBC's library, access to fitness and aquatic services, reduced internet connection costs, and many other discounts. As well, we are increasing our focus on Alumni Day (on September 30 this year) and on the annual awards dinner to be held in November. These are just some of the ways we attract you, our alumni, to get involved again with your university.

This special election issue is yet another way for us to encourage your participation in UBC's affairs. Take a moment to look over our slate of candidates for the Board of Directors, and exercise your vote. Become part of a growing number of UBC grads who are giving back to their alma mater.

John Grunau,
BA'67

Professional Experience:

Taught economics, mathematics and statistics at universities in Canada and Australia. Worked as an economist in regulatory and institutional economics, market assessments, project management, business development and project viability. He also holds degrees from McMaster (MA Economics) and from the Australian National University (MA Mathematics).

Occupation: Principal of ENEC Associates, an energy and resource consulting company, and a director at EmW Productions, specializing in international trade and special events.

Statement: In the past, the Board has had much success organizing events and communicating with its members. I want to be part of the team to ensure that success continues. I also want the Board of Directors to further explore ways of building on that success.

Committee; involved with the Cancer Inter Agency Committee since 1996; involved in the establishment of Science World, sat on the Board of Directors for seven years, named Patron for Science World in 1995 in recognition of significant contributions.

Statement: My days at UBC have helped shape my life. As a third generation alumnus, affection for my alma mater runs as deep as my roots in the community. I will offer the Alumni Association my commitment and enthusiastic support in fostering alumni spirit and pride in the traditions of the university, and contribute a fresh perspective in shaping its future.

Tammie L.P. Mark,

University Activities:

Member AMS Student Admin. Commission; co-editor Commerce Undergrad Employment Yearbook; Volunteer, Open House.

Occupation: Senior Consultant, Westech Information Systems. Member, CMA.

Statement: Having served with not-for-profit organizations at an executive level in the past, I have experienced the pleasures and challenges associated with such organizations. I recognize similarities between the challenges that other groups face and those that the Association faces: how can we promote awareness of our services among our membership, how can we encourage participation? I also recognize that there are many opportunities to bring together alumni, students and the university to foster active, mutually beneficial relations. Through my experience, knowledge and enthusiasm, I hope to contribute to the dedicated team that works to improve and to enhance the level of service provided to our membership.

Darlene Marzari,
BA'64, MSW'66

Professional Experience:

As social planner, fought urban renewal and worked with inner city communities to develop relevant social services. Served eight years as Vancouver Alderman, building neighbourhood councils for upgrading and social service coordination. Served 10 years as a BC MLA, and five years as a minister (Culture & Tourism, and Municipal Affairs). Developed a strategy for planning and managing urban growth in BC using consensus building and inclusion as the basic organizing principle. This policy is still at work today. Founded Kaboodles, now a successful toy business in Vancouver.

Occupation: Retired from active public duty. Now a gardener, a reader, a friend, a full-time mother (to the chagrin of her teenaged boys), and a volunteer on the boards of the Fraser Basin Council, the Katherine Sanford Housing Society, and a few others.

Statement: At a time when the university is developing a new vision for what it can be in the larger community, it's important for graduates to continue to mentor students and perhaps to remind them of the positive aspects of where the institution has been. I think I can help develop the mentoring programs, and I'm old enough to have had some experiences that could be useful, while young enough to remember a few.
