

SPECIAL CONGREGATION SEPT. 3

U.B.C. REPORTS

Volume 5, No. 4

September, 1959

Report Reviews History

An extensive review of the history of UBC is contained in the annual report of President N. A. M. MacKenzie for 1958, the year in which UBC marked its golden jubilee.

The report contains numerous tables showing the country of citizenship, religious affiliations, and geographical distribution of students who attended UBC during the 1957-58 session. There is also a large section of photographs, some never before published, showing early views of the campus.

UBC's history is in some ways a record of perpetual frustration and we have never had enough staff, buildings, money and facilities of any kind, the president says.

PUBLIC RESPONSE

"But there is another way of looking at our history," President MacKenzie continues. "The public has always responded. We have always needed more staff and more buildings because we have always had the one surplus that is desirable — a greater demand for education than our facilities could cope with.

"Since we are proud of what we offer and since we think it good for the community to have as many graduates as possible, we must sometimes rejoice that we have had almost an embarrassment of students."

The president continues: "The history of the University runs parallel, in many respects, to that of the province. As a state institution it depends mainly upon the public treasury for financial support.

"It has prospered with the prosperity of the province. It has also felt the pinch of hard times; even to the point of threatened extinction. But throughout its half century of life, whether in adversity or prosperity, it has always had the devoted support of leading citizens, many of whom have served on its governing bodies."

SMALL BEGINNINGS

UBC opened in 1915, the president points out, with a registration of 435 and offered courses leading to a bachelor of arts degree and the first three years of the bachelor of applied science degree.

In 1958, with just under 10,000 students full undergraduate degree work is offered for 15 degrees in nine faculties. In addition seven degrees are offered in the faculty of graduate studies and Ph.D. work in 24 separate fields of study.

"My very brief history can have no tidy conclusion," the president says. "Neat summaries of the history of an institution can only be made when it is static—or dead. The University of British Columbia is very much alive and I hope it will continue to develop as it has done in the past."

MRS. HELEN McCRAE

UBC Social Worker Named Dean of Women

UBC's board of governors have announced the appointment of Mrs. Helen McCrae as dean of women to succeed Miss Dorothy Mawdsley, who announced her retirement earlier this year.

A graduate of Victoria College, University of Toronto, the Ontario college of education and the school of social work at the University of British Columbia, Mrs. McCrae brings to her new post a rich and varied background of experience.

CAME TO B.C.

As an undergraduate she was awarded the Hamilton Fisk Biggar Scholarship and the Prince of Wales Gold Medal. She began her teaching career in Lindsay, Ontario, where in 1937 she married Charles H. McCrae. After his death, in 1942, she came to British Columbia and enrolled in the school of social work.

After taking her masters degree at UBC she went on to take further graduate work in New York and at Smith College. Until 1950, Mrs. McCrae was district supervisor for the social welfare branch in New Westminster, at which time she joined the staff at UBC as director of field work and lecturer in case work.

WORK IN SWEDEN

Six years ago, at the request of the United Nations, Mrs. McCrae went to Sweden where she served as a consultant on child welfare in 1953 and on case work in 1954-55. Throughout her professional career she has also taken an active part in a wide variety of educational and welfare activities.

As dean of women, Mrs. McCrae will, while retaining her connection with the school of social work, be primarily responsible for looking after the interests and supervising the welfare of all women students on the campus.

10,800 to Register in September

At least 10,800 students are expected to register for the 1959-60 winter session at UBC, according to officials of the registrar's office. Last year 9950 were enrolled.

Registration may go as high as 11,000 but some officials feel that strikes in several major industries may result in some students postponing their education. The fee increase of $100 in all faculties may have some effect also.

Officials in UBC's employment service feel that many more students were employed in the summer of 1959 than in the previous year when the recession and a strike in the construction industry resulted in widespread unemployment.

At press time the employment office had a scant 200 students registered as unemployed. One official said it was difficult to compile accurate figures concerning student unemployment. "Many find jobs without informing us," he said, "and others don't bother to keep in contact with this office."

Registration for the winter session will follow the same pattern established in 1958. Students will register in various campus buildings before going to the armoury to fill out registration booklets and pay their fees.

UBC Honours Leaders of Bench and Bar

A special congregation honouring international figures of the bench and bar will be held at UBC September 3.

Five persons will receive honorary doctor of laws degrees (LL.D.'s) at the special congregation which is being held in conjunction with meetings of the Canadian Bar Association in Vancouver from August 31 to September 5.

The event will be held in the UBC armoury beginning at 8 p.m.

Receiving honorary degrees will be: The Right Honourable Lord Parker of Waddington, Lord Chief Justice of England; Maitre Albert Brunois, advocate to the Paris court of appeal and one of the leading lawyers of France; Chief Justice A. C. Desbrisay, chief justice of B.C. and head of the court of appeal; Mr. Ross L. Malone, president of the American Bar Association, and Mr. Walter Owen, Q.C., president of the Canadian Bar Association.

Lord Chief Justice Will Speak

The congregation address will be given by Lord Parker, who became England's lord chief justice in 1958. Lord Parker was educated at Rugby school and Trinity College, Cambridge before being called to the bar in 1924.

Prior to becoming lord chief justice he was a judge in the high court of justice, King's bench division, from 1950 to 1954 and a lord justice of appeal from 1954 to 1958.

Maitre Albert Brunois has had a distinguished career in law and in the French army during World War II. He escaped from France after the armistice in 1941 and fought with the Free French forces in the campaigns in Italy, France, Germany and Austria.

He is a Chevalier of the Legion of Honour and has been decorated with the Croix de Guerre and the American Bronze Star Medal.

Appointed Chief Justice in 1958

Mr. Desbrisay was appointed chief justice in 1958 having previously practised law in Vancouver since 1913. He is a graduate of Queen's University, a past president of the Vancouver Bar Association and served as a bencher of the Law Society of British Columbia for 13 years.

Since 1942 he has been one of the commissioners from B.C. on the Conference of Commissioners on Uniformity of Legislation in Canada.

Mr. Ross L. Malone, of Roswell, New Mexico, is the 82nd president of the American Bar Association and at 48 is one of the youngest lawyers to head the national organization of the American legal profession.

Mr. Malone served as deputy attorney-general of the United States in 1952-53. He was educated in New Mexico and received his law degree from Washington and Lee University in 1932.

Honour Bar Association Head

Mr. Walter Owen became president of the Canadian Bar Association last year. He was born in Atlin, B.C., but has lived most of his life in Vancouver. He was called to the bar in 1928.

He was crown prosecutor for the County of Vancouver from 1933 to 1942 and was appointed King's Counsel in 1945. He has served as a bencher for the Law Society of B.C. since 1955.

In January this year he attended the Conference of the International Commission of Jurists in New Delhi, India, as a member of the Canadian section.

This will be the second occasion on which the University has held a special congregation honouring distinguished barristers and occupants of the bench. In September, 1952, in conjunction with meetings in Vancouver of the Canadian Bar Association, eight persons received honorary degrees.

On that occasion the present law building was officially opened by the then prime minister of Canada, the Hon. Louis St. Laurent who also received an honorary degree. Others who received degrees at that time were the late Hon. Gordon Sloan, then chief justice of B.C.; the late Hon. Wendell B. Farris, then chief justice of the B.C. supreme court; and General John A. Clark, then president of the Canadian Bar Association.

SCHOLARSHIP FUND HONOURS THE QUEEN'S CANADIAN VISIT

Mr. H. R. MacMillan has donated $50,000 to the University of B.C. for a graduate scholarship fund to mark the visit of Queen Elizabeth and Prince Philip to Canada.

President N. A. M. MacKenzie made an announcement concerning the fund at the dinner honouring the Queen on July 15 in the Faculty club.

The first five scholarships, each valued at $1000, will be awarded in September, President MacKenzie said. They will be for graduate work in any field at UBC.

IMPORTANT DECISIONS MADE

Victoria College Plans

Prepared By
DR. W. H. HICKMAN,
Principal, Victoria College

Within the last month, the governing body of Victoria College has made two important decisions. The first is to develop the present 53-acre site on Lansdowne road as a main campus and to develop the newly-acquired 120-acre site at Gordon Head as an ancillary campus. Secondly, in order to construct much needed buildings on the present site, the College council has decided to initiate a capital fund drive for $1,500,000.

All those interested in problems of higher education in British Columbia might like a brief report on recent developments in Victoria.

Because of natural increase in College enrolments and through the integration of teacher education into the University pattern, Victoria College is growing, with a registration of 869 in 1958-59, an anticipated 1,050 in the coming year and 1,500 by 1963. The College is anxious to be a Liberal Arts institution of 2,000 to 2,500, offering University of British Columbia degrees in arts, science and education. Indeed, it has already decided to offer third year courses in a limited number of fields during the coming session and fourth year courses the following year. Therefore its first graduating class, perhaps 20 in number, should receive degrees in May 1961.

There has, of course, been argument about a name. A small number of local people suggest "University of Victoria," —indicating a desire for a separate institution of higher learning and a preference for the "bigger" word. Others suggest either "University of British Columbia at Victoria, Victoria College," or "Victoria College of the University of British Columbia."

Many people, including Faculty and ex-students, wish to retain "Victoria College" for traditional reasons, and also because it has a local flavour and connotes that intimacy inherent in a good small liberal arts institution. It will be easy to settle the matter of a name; the essential, everyone agrees, is to maintain the academic standards of the College and to continue to grow gradually as a highly respected academic centre for the liberal arts.

With inevitable expansion in mind, for the past few years Victoria College has considerably extended its facilities. The present campus now comprises 53 acres of land — fine view property — on which are two permanent lecture buildings, four large army huts and Dunlop House. In 1959, the College purchased 120 acres, the former Gordon Head Army Camp, situated approximately 1½ miles from the main teaching campus. This area is to be developed immediately for athletics, and at a later date possibly for research, residences, stadium, etc.

For almost two years Victoria College authorities have been giving careful consideration to many suggestions, including one by the Victoria chamber of commerce that an entirely new campus be built at Gordon Head. Ideal as this might sound, the council has decided to develop the present site, convinced that 53 acres is more than sufficient for a teaching campus, convinced that it would be unwise and wasteful to abandon what already exists, and convinced, too, that there is no real prospect of raising immediately the $7,000,000 or $8,000,000 required for a move to another campus.

During the coming session, 1,050 students and 60 faculty members will work in very cramped quarters. For over a year the College has been requesting of the provincial government a new library, a new science building and a power house.

To launch its building programme, the College will make an immediate appeal to the public for $1,500,000. The provincial government has agreed to match the amount collected and Canada Council has promised $300,000.

Thus, as an affiliate of the University of British Columbia, Victoria College (by whatever name it assumes) is preparing students for B.A., B.Sc. and B.Ed. degrees. It will do this on a 173-acre campus, with instruction given in old and new buildings on the Lansdowne road site. It has ambitious plans to place before the citizens of Victoria, the Island and the province which it serves, and from which it will soon be asking unanimous support.

STORY OF EARLY B.C. DAYS UNFOLDED

Papers May Alter History

History books about British Columbia may have to be altered after historians have gone through two boxes of letters recently donated to UBC's library.

The boxes contain correspondence between Sir Joseph Trutch, B.C.'s first lieutenant-governor after Confederation, and his brother, John Trutch, who laid out a large part of the province's early public works.

The correspondence was presented to assistant UBC librarian, Dr. Sam Rothstein, by Mrs. Charlotte Morgan-Kelly of Ladysmith, a niece of the Trutch brothers and Anthony Musgrave, the last colonial governor of B.C.

SON HELPED

Mrs. Morgan-Kelly has left for England, where she will reside with her son, Flight-Lieutenant Michael Kelly, who gathered together many of the letters. Some of the correspondence has already been arranged by noted

B.C. historian B. A. McKelvie of Cobble Hill, Vancouver Island.

Dr. Rothstein said the correspondence would probably fill in many gaps in B.C. history and enable historians to give proper biographical treatment to the Trutch brothers.

In addition to the letters, the two boxes contain many early photographs and drawings of B.C., including a view of the waterfront and harbour of Nanaimo in 1862.

RAILWAY FACTOR

Many of the letters illustrate the differences which arose between the federal and B.C. governments of that time. B.C. entered Confederation on the understanding that the transcontinental railway should be pushed through to the west coast by the government of Sir John A. Mac-

Donald.

England in 1877, Sir Joseph Trutch suggests the possibility of B.C. returning to colonial status if Sir John A. MacDonald lost the election of 1878, which might have meant shelving of the railway plan.

The Trutch brothers co-operated in the building of the first suspension bridge at Spuzzum and they constructed a major portion of the Cariboo road between Yale and Lytton.

LEAD SURVEY

When B.C. entered Confederation, John Trutch was commissioned to lead the first survey party in search of a suitable railway pass through the Rocky Mountains.

Historians who make use of the letters will have a difficult time reading them. Owing to scarcity of paper the brothers often turned their letters sideways and continued writing.

FACULTY ACTIVITIES

President MacKenzie at Council Meetings

PRESIDENT N. A. M. MacKENZIE attended meetings of the Canada Council in Halifax on August 17 and 18.

The president is one of two Canadians appointed trustees of the World Foundation Against Hunger and Misery which recently moved its headquarters from Geneva to Montreal.

This international organization is governed by some 20 individuals from various countries. The Foundation's work, especially in Africa, has been recognized all over the world.

DR. MAX L. HOWELL, assistant professor in the school of physical education, was elected a vice-president of the Canadian Association of Health, Physical Education and Research at the Association's annual meetings in Edmonton in June.

Dr. Howell has also been named a fellow of the American College of Sports Medicine.

MICHAEL M. DANE, instructor in the department of Slavonic studies, was elected secretary-treasurer of the Canadian Association of Slavists in Saskatoon during June.

The conference was organized eight years ago to discuss the latest developments in this field. It is the second time the conference has been held outside the U.S.

DR. PETER OBERLANDER, associate professor of planning and design in the school of architecture, is on a six-weeks visit to Ghana, Africa, at the request of the bureau of technical assistance operations of the United Nations, to advise the UN on the problems involved in establishing a regional training centre in community planning and development there.

ARTIST'S SKETCHES above show the tentative arrangement of buildings for the fine arts center (top of page) and the new wing to the Buchanan building. Fine arts center will be made up of several buildings. Structure at left will contain a theatre and space for fine arts and music. Building in background will accommodate the school of architecture and the small building at right will house the anthropology museum. The new wing to the Buchanan building will serve as a multi-purpose classroom building for arts. It will be built on the parking lot adjacent to the existing building and extend down the east mall to the women's gym.

COMPLETED OVER SUMMER

Six Buildings Ready for Winter Session

Six brand new buildings will be ready for faculty members and students when the 1959-60 winter session opens September 21.

Three new residences, each capable of housing 100 students, have been completed on Marine Drive adjacent to the campus. Cost of the three units was $1,242,293. A central dining and recreational building, to cost $926,064, is being constructed adjacent to the residence units and will be finished by January 1.

New wings to the biological sciences and chemistry buildings will also be ready when classes start. New classrooms, laboratories and offices are contained in the wings.

UBC's new Faculty club, built with a donation of $600,000 to the development fund from Mr. Leon Koerner and the late Mrs. Koerner, opened on June 15. The club was the site of a banquet on July 15 for Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II and His Royal Highness Prince Philip.

LIBRARY WING BEGINS

Under construction is a new wing to the University library, scheduled for completion in September, 1960. The contract, valued at $1,053,810, was awarded in July to the Vancouver construction firm of A. R. Grimwood.

The new wing will double the seating capacity of the existing building and will feature a large undergraduate reading room with an open-shelf collection of books. Other features will be additional stacks and carrels and a room to house special collections such as the 45,000 volume Chinese collection purchased last year by the Friends of the Library.

During the fall contracts will be awarded for construction of a $2,800,000 medical center on University boulevard opposite the War Memorial gymnasium and new wings to the Wesbrook building, to accommodate the faculty of pharmacy, and the Buchanan building. The Buchanan wing will serve as a multi-purpose arts unit.

ARTS CENTER PLANNED

In the planning stage is a $1,500,000 fine arts center which will be built on the main UBC parking lot opposite the Faculty club. The center will be made up of several units and will provide accommodation for the schools of music and architecture.

Also included in the center will be a theatre, an art gallery and an anthropology museum.

The building program is being financed with grants from the provincial government, the Canada Council and the UBC Development fund.

UBC GLASSBLOWER'S WORK ACCEPTED AT U.S. EXHIBIT

John Lees, glassblower for UBC's physics department, has had a sample of his work accepted for display in an international exhibition of contemporary glass.

The entry, a small glass totem pole, is the only piece by a Canadian accepted for the exhibition at the Corning Glass Center, in Corning, New York. The exhibition, which aims at exhibiting the finest glasswork in the world today, is entitled "Glass-1959."

More than 23 countries are represented in the exhibition, which is made up of about 200 pieces.

The exhibition will be on tour for about 18 months. It will appear at the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York, and at art centers in Chicago, Toledo and Virginia.

UBC ALUMNI ROUNDUP

UBC Homecoming Set for November 6 and 7

UBC graduates will return to the campus November 6 and 7 for annual Homecoming celebrations.

An alumni committee under Kingsley Harris, BCom. '47, BSF '48 is in charge of arrangements for the event which will begin on the evening of Nov. 6 with a number of faculty parties.

The following day faculty coffee parties will open the program of events followed by a number of seminars on the topic "The challenge of science." Following the annual Homecoming luncheon in Brock Hall graduates will trek to the stadium to see the Thunderbirds play Saskatchewan in the annual Homecoming football game.

Four Exhibitions to be Staged in University Gallery

Paintings by Canadian and American artists will be featured at four exhibitions in the University art gallery during the autumn.

October 6-31: Second Pacific coast biennial. An exhibition of paintings from the three Pacific states—Washington, Oregon and California. This exhibition is being circulated throughout the U.S. and Canada by the Smithsonian Institute of Washington, D.C.

The first Pacific coast biennial was organized in 1955 to interest art collectors, museums and galleries in Pacific coast art and to encourage and promote work by living artists.

October 6-31: Morris Graves exhibition. Mr. Graves, who was born near Seattle, is one of America's most sensitive and subtle artists. The exhibition will consist of about 25 drawings and paintings. Mr. Graves, who was influenced by Oriental art, did most of his work on thin tissue paper in gouache.

November 1-18: Selection of paintings from the collection of Edmonton art collector Ernest E. Poole. Exhibition will include works by members of the group of seven and European masters such as Constable, Utrillo and Sickert.

November 1-18: Selection of drawings by students of Sister Mary Corita of the Convent of the Sacred Heart, Los Angeles.

Following the football game the three new men's residences on Marine Drive will be officially opened. In the evening there will be reunions for the classes of 1924, '29, '34, '39, '44 and '49 in various campus locations.

The day will end with the Homecoming ball in Brock Hall.

Selected delegates from all parts of B.C. will come to the University September 18 and 19 for a community relations conference. The conference has been limited to 45 persons.

Purpose of the conference, according to John Haar, BA '50, who has organized the event, is to inform delegates of present and future developments on the campus and to make them aware of UBC's problems.

Top University officials will discuss the future of higher education in B.C. and university standards. The role and organization of alumni will also be discussed and extension department officials will outline their program for the coming year and indicate how alumni can assist them.

The alumni annual giving appeal for 1959 stood at more than $8700 as "UBC Reports" went to press. A total of 735 persons had made contributions to the appeal which will be turned over to the UBC development fund for matching grants by the provincial government. The appeal is under the direction of Don Miller, BCom '47.

MEMORIAL FUND SET UP BY BOARD OF GOVERNORS

UBC's board of governors have established a Thea Koerner Memorial Fund, President N. A. M. MacKenzie has announced.

The president said that many friends had expressed a desire for a memorial fund at the University in view of Mrs. Koerner's interest in helping young people. Certain contributions have already been received, the president added.

The board of governors will, in due course, decide on the most appropriate form of memorial, the president said.

INCREASE COURSES 15 PER CENT

Extension Offers 128 Evening Study Courses

More than 5000 persons are expected to register for 128 adult evening classes beginning in late September at the University of B.C.

Officials of the extension department, which administers the evening program, said there is an increase of 15 per cent in the number of courses offered.

BROCHURE AVAILABLE

A brochure giving full details of courses and fees is now available and may be obtained by writing or telephoning to the UBC extension department.

A wide range of liberal arts courses covering such fields as astronomy, economics, fine arts, languages and history are offered for the 1959-60 term.

In the arts and crafts section instruction will be offered in woodblock printing, pottery and ceramics. There will also be a special course in creative art for children on Saturday mornings.

Dr. F. A. Kaempffer, of UBC's physics department, will repeat the popular series of lectures he gave on astronomy over the CBC television network during the summer. Space travel and the possibility of life on other worlds will be discussed during the ten-week course which begins on September 28.

Five courses will be offered in the field of dance and drama. A short intensive workshop in acquiring and using acting technique will be instructed by John Thorne, supervising producer at CBUT and Joy Coghill, director of the Holiday theatre.

Five modern plays will be discussed intensively in a course entitled "Readings in modern theatre," which will be instructed by University teachers and Vancouver theatre directors.

In the dance section a workshop instructed by Mrs. Helen Goodwin will concentrate on active dance composition. There will be a second course in folk dancing and a Saturday morning series in creative dance for children.

A course entitled "Current economic trends in Canada" will deal with such national problems as export markets, taxation, automation, the stock market and immigration policy.

In the field of natural resources the head of the UBC geography department, Prof. J. Lewis Robinson, will discuss Canada's resource development and potential.

In the political science section six courses will deal with current international problems, Canada in world affairs, French society and politics, past political thinkers, theory and practise of communism and the cold war.

Two workshops in creative writing will be highlights of the offerings in English. Other courses will deal with linguistics and writing better English.

SEVEN LANGUAGES

Students will be able to take elementary or advanced instruction in seven languages including Hebrew, Chinese and Russian during the winter. Other languages offered are French, Italian, Spanish and German.

Prof. Harry Adaskin will discuss American music of the past 25 years in one of seven music courses. Other classes will deal with the symphony orchestra and its repertoire, music and civilization, music of different nations and the leading of group singing.

The UBC extension chorus will again be instructed by Nicholas Goldschmidt and there will be a Saturday morning music series for children.

Courses in comparative religion and the validity of Christianity will outline the bases of belief of some of the world's major religions and assess the effect of enquiries into the foundations of Christianity.

Travel in Europe, Latin America, Asia and Mexico will be discussed in four courses. The courses are part of a program of educational tours for adults which is being initiated this session by a number of Canadian universities in cooperation with UBC.

The lecture series preceding the tours are designed to acquaint travellers with the countries to be visited. The courses will also be open to anyone interested in obtaining background information.

BILL BALLENTINE . . . directs series.

Radio Station Makes Grant to University

Vancouver radio station CKWX has made a grant of $6000 to UBC to develop and broadcast a series of experimental radio programs.

The communications division of the extension department, headed by Alan Thomas, will produce the series over a period of eight months beginning in September in cooperation with CKWX.

Arrangements for the grant to UBC were made by the late F. H. Elphicke, former manager of CKWX. The Leon and Thea Koerner Foundation has also made a grant to the extension department to support the series.

PLANNING BEGINS

Active planning of the programs, which will explore the character of modern city life, has begun under the direction of Bill Ballentine, a UBC graduate and former president of the UBC radio society.

The series will include documentaries, music programs, round table discussions and reports of current and civic affairs. News and reviews of Vancouver theatre, radio and television productions will be included as well as book reviews.

Original creative material by Vancouver authors, composers and artists will also be broadcast. New techniques for reporting civic affairs and presenting cultural activities will be explored, Mr. Thomas said.

A number of correspondents, many of them UBC graduates, currently living in overseas centers, have agreed to act as correspondents for the series and to send taped documentary reports for broadcast.

ENCOURAGE SUGGESTIONS

Mr. Thomas said program directors would build a continuous relationship with the audience by encouraging suggestions for programs. "We also hope to set up a board of advisors representing political, religious, business and professional organizations," he added.

Where are These Grads Living Now?

Discussion Program to Add Thirty New Groups

Thirty new discussion groups will be added to the UBC extension department's "living room learning" program in the greater Vancouver area in September.

New Magazines Will Appear on September 15

Two magazines, both edited by members of UBC's English department, will make their appearance on September 15.

The University's first official publication, entitled "Canadian Literature: A quarterly of criticism and review", will be edited by assistant professor George Woodcock. The Leon and Thea Koerner Foundation has made a contribution toward the publication of the journal.

Purpose of the magazine is to inform readers of developments in Canadian literature, review all books of literary interest written by a Canadian or about Canada, and to print critical essays on writers and writing.

The second publication, entitled "Prism", will be edited by assistant professor Jan de Bruyn. It will publish only imaginative as opposed to critical writing and the editors intend to emphasize the writing of western Canada and, in particular, B.C.

Fiction, drama, poetry and familiar essays will appear. "Prism" will be the only magazine in Canada which will regularly publish plays.

Both magazines will appear quarterly and will sell at the rate of $3 per year. Subscriptions to "Canadian Literature" may be obtained by writing to Mr. I. Bell, at the UBC library.

Subscriptions to "Prism" should be sent to Mr. Jan de Bruyn at 3492 West 35th Ave., Vancouver 13, B.C.

Liberal arts discussion groups will be established in North and West Vancouver, Burnaby and Vancouver. The program began in September, 1957, with a grant of $32,000 from the Fund for Adult Education, an independent organization established by the Ford Foundation.

Since the program was first organized by Knute Buttedahl, 1100 persons throughout the province have joined 95 groups. Discussion topics range from modern painting and the humanities to world affairs, economics and Russian foreign policy.

Mr. Jindra Kulich, a discussion leader for the past two years, will co-ordinate the program in the greater Vancouver area. Working with him as regional assistants will be Mrs. Karen Belisle, Mrs. Anne Banninger, Denis Franklin and Nigel Nixon.

The program will also be expanded in other parts of the province. Both Prince George and Victoria have active groups and additional classes are planned in the autumn.

Persons who enrol for one of the groups receive a set of readings which are studied in advance. When the groups meet in the home of one of the participants discussion is led by trained leaders and stimulated by recordings, slides and films.

Graduates Contribute

In a recent review of industrial microbiology in British Commonwealth countries, the published accounts of scientific research showed that of Canada's contribution to this field 36 per cent of the papers were written by graduates in agriculture microbiology from UBC.
