UBC REPORTS CAMPUS EDITION

Two From UBC on Task Force

The provincial government has established a task force to make recommendations to the minister of education, Mrs. Eileen Dailly, on changes in the Universities Act.

The six-member task force includes Prof. William Armstrong, deputy president of UBC; Miss Bonnie Long, external affairs officer for the UBC Alma Mater Society and a student in the School of Home Economics; and Prof. Walter Young, who resigned as head of UBC's Department of Political Science in June of this year to take a similar position at the University of Victoria.

Other members of the task force are Dr. Eileen Herridge, of the special programs division of Vancouver City College; Prof. Kenji Okuda, of the Economics department at Simon Fraser University; and Mr. John Bremer, B.C.'s Commissioner of Education, who will serve as chairman.

In announcing the task force of Aug. 23, Mrs. Dailly said it would examine "the internal and external forms of running universities, with particular emphasis on the relationship between the government and the universities."

Prof. Armstrong told UBC Reports that he hoped that provision would be made for public review of the work of the task force.

He said he hoped the task force would follow the pattern set by the Commission on Post-secondary Education in Ontario, which initially produced a draft report for public discussion.

He said that if the Ontario pattern were followed the task force would issue a draft of proposed changes in the Universities Act for public discussion and scrutiny. The task force would then compile a document for submission to B.C.'s minister of education.

It is expected the final proposals will be ready for submission next summer.

Prof. Armstrong said the provincial government seemed most interested in recommendations which would lead to the establishment of an intermediary body between the government and the universities of B.C.

The task force on the Universities Act was the fourth such body announced this year to deal with various aspects of B.C.'s educational system.

First-year Law student Svend Robinson, who is also a student member of the UBC Senate, and Prof. George Tomkins, of the Faculty of Education at UBC, are included in a 20-member General Advisory Board on education announced by Mrs. Dailly in May of this year.

Advisory Committee Seeks Names

All members of the University community — faculty, students, staff and alumni — have been asked to submit the names of prospective candidates to succeed President Walter H. Gage.

Dr. Gage, who has been President of UBC since April 3, 1969, has signified his intention to retire as President, effective June 30, 1975. This was announced on May 2 by Dr. Allan M. McGavin, Chairman of UBC's Board of Governors.

A 24-member Advisory Committee for Recommendation of Presidential Candidates to the Board of Governors, chaired by Mrs. Beverley K. Lecky, a member of the Board, has issued an appeal to the University community to submit the names of prospective candidates and "opinions as to appropriate attributes of any candidate."

The committee has also asked for views on the attributes desirable for the next President of UBC and "expressions of opinions concerning the crucial issues likely to affect the scope and nature of the office of President in the years ahead."

In a letter addressed to the University community, Mrs. Lecky said that although no deadline had been set, "it would be helpful to the Committee if your letter was received by Oct. 25, 1973."

Here is the full text of the letter addressed to the University community by Mrs. Lecky:

Four Major UBC Projects Underway

UBC's Board of Governors awarded two major construction contracts during the summer for buildings that will provide new teaching and research facilities for the Faculties of Law and Commerce and Business Administration.

Award of the contracts brings to four the number of construction projects underway on the UBC campus. Nearing completion are an office-seminar addition to the existing Geological Sciences Centre and a new Dairy Cattle Research and Teaching Unit for the Department of Animal Science in the South Campus research area.

Frank Stanzl Construction Ltd. is adding a four-storey wing and carrying out extensive renovations to the existing seven-storey office wing of the Henry Angus Building to provide new facilities for the Faculty of Commerce and Business Administration.

Work on the Henry Angus Building is scheduled for completion in August, 1974. Project architect is Reno C. Negrin and Associates of Vancouver. The total cost of the project will be $3,374,477.

Until new accommodation is available to the Department of Anthropology and Sociology, which formerly occupied part of the office wing of the Henry Angus Building, the department is located in several portable and temporary buildings on the West Mall to the north of the Ponderosa Cafeteria.

The new Faculty of Law Building, under construction on the East Mall, is being built by A.R. Grimwood Construction at a cost of $3,048,992.

The new Law Faculty facilities are an extension and addition to the existing Law Building at the corner of the East Mall and Crescent Road.

The new building will contain a new Law Library, faculty offices, a classroom block and an area designed to promote interaction between students and teaching staff.

The existing Law Building, which contains the Law Library and reading rooms, will be converted to a moot courtroom, where students will practice courtroom techniques, six seminar rooms and offices for the Law Students' Association.

While the Law Building is under construction Faculty of Law students and teachers are occupying one of the former women's residences and other temporary accommodation on the site of the former Fort Camp Residence north of Northwest Marine Drive.

Architect for the Law Building project is Fred T. Hollingsworth, of West Vancouver.

The Dairy Cattle Research and Teaching Unit under construction for the Department of Animal Science on the South Campus will be used to teach courses in dairy cattle nutrition, physiology, breeding and management. It will also provide a service to dairy cattle producers in B.C. and has been designed to accommodate large numbers of visiting school children and the general public, who will watch modern dairy methods in action.

Total cost of the Dairy Cattle Unit will be $830,528.

The addition to the Geological Sciences Centre, being built at a total cost of $647,936, will provide office accommodation for faculty members in the Department of Geology, and seminar rooms.

Geographer Honored

The Geographic Society of Chicago conferred an honorary degree on Dr. J. Lewis Robinson, former head of the University of B.C.'s Department of Geography, in April.

Each year the Geographic Society, the second oldest in the United States, honors geographers for their contributions to their profession. Celebrating its 75th anniversary this year, the Society decided to recognize a Canadian for the first time. They chose Dr. Robinson for his leadership in Canadian geography and his work in map editing.

Dr. Robinson is an authority on Canadian geography and has published more books, articles, chapters and maps than any other person working in his area. He was the first professional geographer ever hired by the federal government. He was invited to UBC to organize a program of courses in geography in

Most Favor Using Lands For Parks and Education

The University Endowment Lands adjacent to the University of B.C. campus should be left undeveloped for various park uses and educational purposes.

This is the overwhelming preference expressed by the UBC community to an ad hoc committee established by UBC's President, Dr. Walter H. Gage, to consider future use of the UEL, the 2,558.3-acre area that lies between the UBC campus and the City of Vancouver.

The Lands, set aside in 1923 to provide endowment income for the University as the result of development, are owned and administered by the provincial government. The University does not play any part in this activity and development of just over 730 acres of the Lands for housing and commercial purposes has not produced any endowment for UBC to date.

MADE PUBLIC

The report of the ad hoc UBC committee was made public on July 12 following an announcement by the provincial government that it was considering leasing up to 2,500 acres in the Lower Mainland for moderate-cost homes.

In addition to 1,700 acres of the Endowment Lands, other areas under consideration for development by the provincial government are 200 acres on Burnaby Mountain and portions of 650 acres in North Vancouver.

In releasing the report of the ad hoc committee, President Gage emphasized that it is an expression of opinions by students and faculty members at UBC about the future use of the Lands and is not an official expression of views by the University.

The opinions expressed in 79 written statements to the committee are sharply at odds with the proposal to develop the Lands for housing.

"In our view the scale of the response indicates a widespread and serious concern on the part of the University community," the report says. "We do not, of course, claim that it is a statistically valid sample of opinion but we are firmly of the belief that the views are probably those of the majority within the University."

Of the preferences stated for future use of the Lands, 71 per cent advocated leaving the area undeveloped in terms of housing. Some favored an untouched area, others wanted a developed park, still others wanted a combination of the two. This category also includes those who wanted the Lands left undeveloped for various educational purposes.

Other preferences, expressed in terms of percentages are: housing and concomitant uses — 12 per cent; campus extension — 5 per cent; industrial research park — 2 per cent; and other uses — 10 per cent.

Under other uses, preferences expressed were for a university/new town, pedestrian paths and trails of a particular kind, a site for a day-care centre, a wildlife park and zoo, and a canal to accommodate an aquatic course.

Those who advocated some housing development were mainly in favor of medium-cost housing associated with concomitant development, such as shops, schools, movie theatres, restaurants and pubs, "all of which were seen as enhancing the life of the University community," the report says.

The report also deals at some length with the use of the Lands for educational purposes and summarizes information received from various UBC departments and Faculties.

"The University Endowment Lands are at present used by numerous groups of students and faculty from the Faculties of Forestry and Education and the Departments of Anthropology, Botany, Geology, Geography, Plant Science, Soil Science and Zoology," the report says.

In addition to field trips and small research studies by students, the Lands are used for important research studies and as a source of laboratory materials by some staff members and graduate students.

"Much value is placed by many individuals on retention of the Lands to provide 'open space' amenity values and to facilitate low-intensity recreational use (trails, hiking, bird-watching, cycling, horseback riding) as well as maintenance of situations for instruction of students for many schools, universities and related groups in the Lower Mainland," the report says.

RESERVE LAND

On the question of an extension of the existing UBC campus, the report has this to say: "It is not generally realized that virtually the whole of the present campus has already been designated for use, and consequently if any attempt is made to anticipate the University's educational requirements over, say, the next 50 years then it is essential to reserve additional land for academic developments of various kinds."

Finally, the committee sets out two conclusions in its report:

"1. We strongly recommend the preparation of a development plan for the UEL.

"2. The lack of effective supervision and control of the undeveloped areas is such that serious deterioration in their condition is taking place which it is essential to arrest. Further, steps should be taken immediately to preserve selected areas of particular value."

Program to Combat Illiteracy Favored

UBC's Faculty of Arts favors a program to combat "functional illiteracy" among Arts students.

The head of the Faculty, Dean Douglas Kenny, is forming a committee which will bring forward proposals for implementing a required program of non-credit instruction in writing for students "who fail to meet a minimal standard of competence."

The Faculty approved such a program in principle after receiving a report from its Curriculum Development Committee which said, "That an intelligent 18-year-old should lack the distinction between a comma and a full stop, or should be unable to control the simplest pronoun references, is certainly remarkable."

Such students, the report added, have a personal problem, "like not being able to swim."

The committee said it was not under the illusion that it could solve the problem of bad writing. "When dissatisfaction is so widespread, and proposed solutions are so much at variance, the problems must be complex and must require contributions from many people."

The report said that many faculty members distinguish between teaching good writing, which the committee considers a legitimate element in a liberal education, and teaching merely correct writing. "... we think there is a strong feeling in the Faculty that teaching students the elements of spelling, grammar and composition is none of our business, and intrudes a remedial task into the main business of the University," it said.

Many faculty members, the report said, accept the dignity of criticizing writing at the graduate level, but deny their responsibility for it at the freshman level. "The reason obviously is that they are dismayed by the badness of freshman writing."

The committee also rejected the idea that English 100, a required course for all first-year students, should be used to teach the elements of correct writing. This, the report said, "is an abuse not only of its functions as a literature course, but also of its functions as an essay course."

The report added that the committee intends no criticism of the English department, which is forced to set up special basic composition sections within English 100 as the result of "the demands which the rest of the Faculty and the rest of the University are making upon it."

English 100, or similar essay courses, when used for remedial teaching, are obviously not well adapted to the needs of the foreign student, who wants to master a second language, the report said. "But neither does it take the measure of the product of a B.C. school."

The committee also suggested in its report that the committee now being formed by Dean Kenny consider the question: "How can the teaching of good writing, especially to first-year students, be spread more widely among departments?"

Campus Traffic Reports Studied

A broadly-based presidential committee will meet for the first time this week to begin consideration of reports dealing with campus transportation and traffic circulation and development of the northwestern campus in the vicinity of the new Museum of Anthropology.

UBC's Board of Governors, at its July meeting, asked UBC's President, Dr. Walter H. Gage, to establish the committee to consider and develop further proposals contained in the two reports.

The committee, which is chaired by Mr. Neville Smith, the director of UBC's Department of Physical Plant, will be asked to consult with various University groups, the University Endowment Lands, the provincial Department of Highways, the City of Vancouver and other interested individuals and organizations in the vicinity of the University about proposals which have off-campus implications.

The reports are a campus transportation and circulation study prepared by John Graham consultants Ltd., a traffic engineering and planning firm located in Seattle, and a feasibility study of traffic flow in the northwestern section of the campus in and around the site of the new Museum of Anthropology, which is being built near Northwest Marine Drive on the site of the former Fort Camp Residence.

The latter study was prepared by the firm of Arthur Erickson/Architects, the firm which is designing the new Museum of Anthropology.

At its July meeting the Board approved only one proposal contained in the report from Mr. Erickson's firm. The proposal is for the construction of a parking lot and access roads for the new Museum, which is scheduled to open on April 1, 1975.

Mr. Smith told UBC Reports that he would like to receive, in writing, any ideas or thoughts from members of the University community bearing on the questions of campus traffic and circulation and development of the northwest section of campus.

The report by John Graham Consultants Ltd. deals with the problems of circulation, traffic and parking on the entire UBC campus. The report says that improved roadway facilities leading to the campus will be needed to avoid inconveniences, delays and hazards.

The report says that the extension to 16th Avenue leading to UBC's South Campus, "although beyond the control of the University, needs to be completed early."

President Gage said there had been widespread concern expressed earlier by a number of individuals and organizations representing citizens living near the University about reports that the University plans to close the 10th Avenue-University Boulevard roadway leading to the campus.

"The Graham report," President Gage said, "does not consider or recommend this course of action, and in any case the matter of road access to the campus is not controlled by the University."

UPGRADE SIGNAL

He emphasized that the committee which he had established would consult with interested individuals and groups about the proposals in the report.

The transportation and circulation report includes recommendations for upgrading the traffic signal control at the corner of University Boulevard and Westbrook Crescent, the road which forms the eastern boundary of the campus; simplifying of the complex intersection of Northwest Marine Drive, Chancellor Boulevard and Crescent Road; improvement of on- and off-campus roadways for cyclists; and creation of a new campus bus terminus and central parcel delivery system.

The report also considers a number of alternatives for providing improved on-campus transportation, including fixed-rail transit, buses and rubber-tired trackless trains.

The report recommends that the University consider the use of rubber-tired trackless trains, made up of a propane-powered tractor pulling a number of passenger coaches at speeds up to 20 miles an hour.

The trains would follow a route around the perimeter of the campus, stopping frequently to drop off and pick up passengers. The campus system would also be tied into improved bus services leading to and from Vancouver, which are also recommended in the report.

The feasibility study of traffic flow by Mr. Erickson's firm is designed to cope with traffic problems which are expected to arise at the northwestern edge of the campus when the Museum of Anthropology and the planned Asian Centre, adjacent to the popular Nitobe Memorial Garden, are complete.

Other public facilities, such as the Frederic Wood Theatre and the Music Building, make this one of the most heavily-trafficked areas on the campus throughout the year.

The study proposes the elimination of some north campus parking, development of a visitor drop-off and campus entrance at the rear of the existing UBC Armory and the eventual creation of a new entrance to Parking Lot R from Northwest Marine Drive. At present, access to R Lot is from the University's West Mall.

The committee chaired by Mr. Smith includes representatives from the University's Traffic and Parking Committee, the Safety, Security and Fire Prevention Committee, the Museum of Anthropology Project Committee, the Anthropology and Sociology Project Committee, the Asian Centre Project Committee, the Department of Information Services, the Academic Planning Department, the President's Committee on Siting, the Traffic Department, the Botanical Garden and the UBC Senate.

The President has been empowered to appoint other persons to the committee if necessary.

New UBC Courses Listed in Supplement

If you want to know what's new in UBC's academic offerings for the current Winter Session, pick up a copy of the supplement to UBC's 1973-74 Calendar of course offerings.

The supplement, which is available at registration offices throughout the University and at the Registrar's Office in the General Services Administration Building, lists all course changes from the complete 1972-73 Calendar and new courses approved by UBC's Senate since the 1973-74 Calendar was issued in April.

The supplement resulted from a recommendation made to UBC's Senate in November, 1972.

The new supplement contains, among other things:

A section on increased opportunities for part-time studies leading to degrees;

The news that Alma Mater Society fees have been increased from $29 to $34 to provide a fund to amortize part of the cost of constructing a new covered swimming pool on campus; and

A detailed listing of new courses and programs in almost every UBC Faculty and School, including new baccalaureate and master's programs in the School of Nursing and new degree programs in the Faculty of Graduate Studies.

Mr. J.E.A. Parnall, UBC's Registrar, said the supplement to the Calendar would be mailed to all members of the University faculty for their

Hydro Introduces New Express Bus

B.C. Hydro introduced a new express bus service to the UBC campus from the North Shore on Sept. 4.

The service originates at Lonsdale Ave. and 29th St. in North Vancouver, Monday through Friday, at 7:13 a.m., 7:43 a.m. and 8:13 a.m. Buses will arrive at UBC one hour later in each case.

Return departure times from UBC are 3:37 p.m. and 4:37 p.m. with arrivals at Lonsdale and 29th scheduled for 4:43 p.m. and 5:43 p.m., respectively.

information and to enable them to provide information to registering students.

He said the 1973-74 supplement was something of an experiment and would be subject to revision in the light of comments and suggestions from students and faculty members.

Next year, he said, it is hoped to list in the supplement all the courses which would not be given in the Winter Session as well as new offerings.

From North Vancouver buses travel via Lonsdale, First St. and Forbes Ave. to Marine Drive, picking up passengers at regular bus stops as far as Lions Gate Bridge. Buses then travel non-stop to the Broadway and Granville intersection in Vancouver, non-stop again via Tenth Ave. to the Blanca bus loop, and to the campus via University Boulevard.

Buses return to North Vancouver via the same route. Fare is 40 cents each way.

RULES FOR STUDENTS

Students are requested to report to the President in writing the churches they intend to make their place of worship.

Men and women are not permitted to lodge in the same house, unless they are members of the same family, or receive special permission from the Senate.

Students are required to attend at least seven-eighths of the total number of lectures in any one course. Those whose unexcused absences exceed one-eighth of the total number of lectures on a course shall not be permitted to come up for the examination in that course.

Credit for attendance on any lecture or class may be refused on the grounds of lateness, inattention, neglect of study, or disorderly conduct in the classroom.

Military training for two sessions is compulsory upon all male students.

Good board and lodging can be obtained in the vicinity of the College buildings at a cost of from $20 per month; or, separately, board at $14 to $21 per month; rooms at $6 to $9 per month.

After the commencement of a lecture students are not allowed to enter, except with the permission of the Instructor. If permitted to enter, they will, on reporting themselves at the end of the lecture, be marked "late." Two "lates" will count as one absence.

Women students under twenty-five years of age are permitted to occupy suites in apartment houses only when accompanied by some older person. Any such arrangements must be made in consultation with the Dean of Women.

The University authorities do not assume responsibilities which naturally rest with parents. This being so, it is the policy of the University to rely on the good sense and on the home training of students for the preservation of good moral standards and for appropriate modes of behavior and dress.

The above regulations affecting student conduct appear in various editions of the University of B.C. Calendar between 1915 and 1973. Compiled by Mrs. Laurenda Daniells, University Archivist, Special Collections Division, Main Library.

MUSIC was all-pervasive on the UBC campus this summer. Vancouver Symphony Orchestra conductor Kazuyoshi Akiyama, above, drilled the National Youth Orchestra in the Old Auditorium. It was the first time that the 110-member NYO, which gave a number of public concerts while in Vancouver, held its Summer training session in the West. Students attending UBC's academic Summer Session were entertained at a series of noon-hour concerts given by musical groups of all kinds at various campus locations. The flute-and-piano trio shown below playing in front of the Music Building obviously had a relaxing effect on two of the listeners.

UBC Food Prices Up

Significant increases in the cost of raw food and labor have resulted in price increases for most items sold through campus outlets of the UBC Food Services Department.

The increases, which were effective on June 1, were discussed with the Presidential Committee for University Community Services — Food Services, which endorsed four recommendations bearing on the increases. They were:

1. That the increase be selective (as opposed to across-the-board) so as to increase revenues by approximately 10 per cent;
2. That prices be based on food cost to UBC, adjusted to reflect normal market conditions;
3. That the increase be for a 12-month period; and
4. That where possible, prices be rounded to the nearest five cents.

Following is a schedule of prices of items sold through campus Food Services outlets. Old prices are shown in brackets. Where no price appears in brackets, the price of the item remains unchanged.

New Faculty Guidelines Proposed

UBC's new Dean of Education is moving quickly to change the course of teacher education in the Faculty.

In his first couple of months on the job, Dean John Andrews has laid out four guidelines for future development and named two new division heads and an assistant dean.

The guidelines, Dean Andrews emphasizes, are merely that, with a lot of thinking and discussion yet to be done before anything is implemented.

But they have emerged from discussions with a wide variety of people in the provincial Department of Education, teacher and trustee groups and within the Faculty itself.

The guidelines are:

- A set of alternatives at the undergraduate level which take different approaches to teacher education;

- A "professional year" for undergraduate students during which they would take nothing but education;

- Closer relationships between the Faculty and the schools in the province; and

- Expansion and improvement of the Faculty's graduate program.

"You might say that the Faculty of Education is moving into phase two of its development," says Dean Andrews, formerly assistant director of the Ontario Institute of Studies in Education and a well-known scholar in the field of organization theory as applied to education.

"In the 17 years since it was founded the Faculty has had a remarkably stable leadership, with most of the people in leadership positions being about the same age.

"This year the Faculty not only has a new dean but five of the six central administrative posts in the Faculty are held by people who have held these positions for less than one year.

"In its first phase the Faculty accomplished a particular set of goals. This is now the occasion for establishing a new set of goals and we expect to be moving in some rather different directions."

Dean Andrews adds that there is general agreement that the overall undergraduate program in the Faculty is obsolete, "but it has been difficult to bring about change because the Faculty is so big that it has been difficult to get a consensus on anything. This is accentuated by the fact that it is impossible to say that there is one best method to educate teachers.

"I believe that the best course of action is to develop alternative programs rather than having one uniform program as has been the case in the past. It would become a pluralistic approach, within carefully set standards to avoid the chaos of everybody doing his own thing."

Students would thus be offered a choice of programs and would choose one which suited their philosophy and their learning style.

Within these alternatives Dean Andrews sees teacher training in specialized areas such as open-area schools. "These schools are becoming very common in B.C. and yet, in the opinion of many, they are often not succeeding as they should when teachers have no special preparation."

A "professional year" is a year in which teachers would take all of their courses in the Faculty of Education. "If we are going to put alternative programs into effect we must have full control, for at least one year, over the timetable of the student, because we can't have him out in the schools doing student teaching when he is supposed to be in a math course," Dean Andrews says. This should come as early as possible, he adds, so students can find out whether they are cut out for teaching.

Dean Andrews adds that he sees the need to break down "something of a gulf" between the Faculty and the schools of the province. "Not only do we want to establish closer relationships centering on student teaching but I believe that teachers must continue with their professional development throughout their careers.

"Teacher training is not a one-shot affair. The process must be continuous if a teacher is to keep up with the present rate of change. I think also that it is extremely important for faculty members to work with teachers in research projects and development in the schools. A lot of this type of co-operation is going on right now without attracting much attention, and it is a very solid foundation on which to base the kind of programs that I am speaking of."

Dean Andrews believes that expansion and improvement of the Faculty's graduate program must receive a high priority. "The sad fact is that a very large proportion of the specialists in B.C. schools had to go to the United States for their graduate work because of the lack of the full development of graduate studies in education here at UBC.

"It is my feeling that the graduate program in education is not extensive enough for a university of this size and in many areas of present involvement the program needs a great deal of strengthening."

Search Begins for Commerce Dean

While you were away:

—The Dean of the Faculty of Commerce and Business Administration resigned;

—A Canadian specializing in federal politics was named head of the Department of Political Science in the Arts Faculty;

—The new Dean of the Faculty of Education appointed three persons to top administrative positions within the Faculty;

—A UBC graduate became head of the Economics department in the Faculty of Arts;

—One of Canada's leading concert pianists and a noted choral director and singer were appointed to the School of Music; and —In the Faculty of Medicine, a leading researcher in the field of diseases of the eye became head of the Ophthalmology department and a family planning expert was named head of the Department of Health Care and Epidemiology.

Here are the details.

Mr. Colin Gourlay, assistant dean of the Faculty of Commerce and Business Administration, has been named Acting Dean of the Faculty following the resignation of Dean Philip H. White, who left Aug. 1 to head up a new European real estate development company.

The new company will be part of the Bronfman organization of Canada. It is believed that the new company will be the first wholly Canadian-owned enterprise to enter the European real estate market.

A search committee has been set up to find a successor to Dean White. Chairman of the committee is Prof. L.G. Mitten of the Faculty of Commerce and Business Administration.

Prof. H.A.C. Cairns has been appointed head of the Department of Political Science, succeeding Prof. Walter Young, who has taken a similar post at the University of Victoria.

Prof. Cairns, who has been a member of the UBC faculty since 1960, is currently on a year's leave of absence until July, 1974. Mr. R. Stephen Milne will be acting head of the department until Prof. Cairns returns.

Dean John Andrews joined the Faculty of Education on July 1, succeeding Dean Neville Scarfe. Formerly assistant director of the Ontario Institute of Studies in Education, Dean Andrews is a well-known scholar in the field of organization theory as applied to education.

Prof. Scarfe, although retired as Dean, will continue to teach Geography in the Faculty of Education.

Soon after his arrival Dean Andrews announced three new appointments to top administrative posts within the Faculty. Dr. Roy Bentley has been named associate dean; Dr. Douglas McKie is the new director of Graduate Studies, and Dr. Ian Housego is now director of the Division of Elementary Education.

Prof. R.A. Shearer has been appointed head of the Department of Economics replacing Mr. A. Milton Moore. A graduate of UBC, Prof. Shearer has been on the UBC staff since 1963.

Prof. Shearer served on the research staff of the federal Royal Commission on Banking and Finance in 1962-63 and has written extensively on international and Canadian monetary policies and regional economic policy.

Dr. Robert Silverman, one of Canada's most prominent concert pianists, has been appointed to the faculty of the Department of Music. The Montreal-born pianist, winner of major awards and prizes in Canada, the United States, Europe and South America, will teach piano and some music appreciation courses formerly taught by Prof. Harry Adaskin and his wife, Mrs. Frances Adaskin.

Another new appointment is Mr. James L. Fankhauser, a noted choral director and lyric tenor, who this summer was assistant director of the Aspen Choral Institute of the famed Aspen Festival in Colorado. He will teach voice, choral conducting and advanced music theory.

Dr. Stephen Drance has been appointed head of the Department of Ophthalmology in UBC's Faculty of Medicine, succeeding Dr. A.J. Elliott who is continuing as a full professor in the department.

Dr. Drance is probably best known for his discovery of some causes of low-tension glaucoma — a common eye disease that can lead to blindness.

He is the editor of the Canadian Journal of Ophthalmology, was a member of the Medical Research Council of Canada from 1966 to 1971, has been a visiting professor at seven universities, and has written a book and more than 100 scientific papers on ophthalmology.

New head of the Department of Health Care and Epidemiology in UBC's Faculty of Medicine is Prof. C.J.G. Mackenzie, who has been acting head since December, 1969.

Prof. Mackenzie is currently chairman of the provincial Royal Commission on the Use of Pesticides and Herbicides.

His work in epidemiology — the study of the occurrence and prevalence of disease in populations — is extensive, and includes environmental medicine, problems in the delivery of health care, and, more recently, the epidemiology of multiple sclerosis, a chronic disease of the central nervous system.

But he is probably best known for his work in family planning. He has conducted a three-year study of the attitudes of Vancouverites to birth control and was consultant to the federal government as co-ordinator of the National Conference on Family Planning in Ottawa last year.

New Residence Committees Formed

A new committee structure designed to provide greater involvement by resident students in the administration of UBC's student residences will begin functioning in September.

The new committee structure, approved by UBC's Board of Governors in June on the recommendation of its property committee, is the result of a series of discussions which took place over a period of several months early in 1973 between administration officials and representatives of students living in residences.

A total of four committees are provided for under the new structure.

1. A 12-member Single Student Residences Co-ordinating Committee will meet once a week. This committee, which will assume the functions of the former Area Co-ordinators' and Student Affairs Staff Committee, will be made up of the residence area co-ordinator, president and vice-president of each residence, the Director of Residences and the business manager and student affairs advisor of the Housing Administration.

2. An Acadia Co-ordinating Committee, made up of two elected representatives from Acadia Park and two from Acadia Camp, who will meet monthly with the Director of Residences and the business manager.

3. A Joint Residences Committee, made up of one representative from each of the five residence areas, to be elected from the Co-ordinating Committees named in 1. and 2. above. The committee will meet with the Director of Residences and the business manager at least four times a year, twice in the fall term and twice in the spring term.

The Joint Residences Committee will work with the Director of Residences in the formation of policy recommendations for the effective operation and management of the service, including rent and/or rate setting for students in residence.

The committee will work in conjunction with the Housing Administration on each year's budget and will recommend spending priorities to the Director. All financial information necessary and relevant to these duties will be accessible to the committee.

4. The President's Residence Advisory Committee will be reconstituted and supplemented by the addition of the five student members of the Joint Residences Committee.

In addition to the five students, members of the reconstituted Advisory Committee are: Director of Residences Mr. Leslie Rohringer, who will act as chairman; Mr. Allen Baxter, UBC Treasurer; Miss Ruth M. Blair, Food Services Department; Dr. A.M. Johnson, University Health Service; Miss M.R.E. Russell, Faculty of Education; and Mr. A.F. Shirran, director of the Office of Student Services.

The Dean of Women will also be a member of the committee. A search committee is currently seeking a successor to Dean Helen McCrae, who retired this year.

The revised terms of reference of the committee are:

- To receive full information from and to advise the Director of Residences on all matters affecting students in residence, and

- To maintain liaison between the academic counselling, health, recreational and financial developments of the University.

Although the Director is not bound to accept the advice of the committee, he must make his policies known to the committee and must give the committee the opportunity of examining his proposals before they are implemented. The committee will meet at least twice during the Winter Session.

Another recommendation approved by the Board of Governors at its April meeting called for the Board's finance committee to provide to the above committees the short form of the annual financial statement in respect of residence operations.

The short form of the financial statement for the fiscal year ended March 31, 1973, appears below.

Visitors Praise Campus Residences

UBC's student residences came in for high praise from top officials of the Association of College and University Housing Officers during the annual conference of the Association at UBC this summer.

More than 500 delegates from 300 universities in the United States and Canada attended the five-day conference, which was held outside the U.S. for the first time in the 25-year history of the Association.

UBC's director of housing, Mr. Leslie Rohringer, said delegates took time out during the conference to inspect UBC's student housing facilities and he received many compliments on the calibre of campus accommodation.

"One of the reasons why these conventions are held on university campuses is to give delegates the opportunity to inspect student accommodation in the different institutions," said Mr. Rohringer.

ACUHO president Mr. Charles Frederiksen, of Iowa State University, told UBC Reports that he was particularly impressed with the Walter H. Gage Residence and the fact that each student has a private room. "Generally, on U.S. campuses students share two to a room; very few universities have single accommodation on the scale that you have it here. The preference among students is for single rooms and you have done it admirably here."

Mr. George L. Merrill, of the California State University and College System and vice-president of ACUHO, said the California system embraces 19 campuses, 15 of which have housing facilities. "We have nothing that would compare with the luxury of the Gage complex. We have nice facilities but nothing quite like this. I would say that the Gage Residence is rather unique in college accommodation."

Miss Joan Mortell, of the University of California at Santa Barbara, said the apparent coldness and starkness of the concrete finish of the Gage Residence bothered her at first, "but the longer I was here and the more I was exposed to the oranges and reds and other bright colors of the decorating scheme, the warmer the building became. I now find the building very enjoyable to be in."

ACUHO vice-president Mr. Chester Melanoski, of the University of Rochester, said his university has no facilities to compare with the Gage Residence for undergraduate students. "Our undergraduates would be champing at the bit to live in accommodation such as this."

UBC students not only enjoy superior accommodation but rentals and room-and-board rates are considerably below those paid by many of their U.S. counterparts. The single-room rate in the Gage Residence is $566 without meals, while the room-and-board rate in other single-student residences on campus ranges from $863 to $975 per academic year.

By contrast, the University of Rochester charges $1,450 for room and board; the University of Iowa $870 for double room with board; and room-and-board costs at California universities range from $1,050 to $1,250.

AMS, UBC Concerts Set

Music will predominate at a series of special events planned by the Alma Mater Society and the University in September.

During registration week (Sept. 4-7) four rock groups will stage free noon-hour concerts on the south plaza of the Student Union Building. Appearances will be as follows: Tuesday — White Lunch; Wednesday — Mr. Natural; Thursday — Chant; Friday — Ram.

The first major concert sponsored by the AMS is scheduled for the War Memorial Gymnasium on Thursday, Sept. 13, at 8 p.m.

British blues star John Mayall will appear in concert backed by his own band.

The Vancouver Symphony Orchestra will return to the UBC campus on Thursday, Sept. 27, for a free 12:45 p.m. concert under the sponsorship of the Dean of Women's Office with the assistance of the UBC Alumni Association. The VSO, under conductor Kazuyoshi Akiyama will play a program of traditional and contemporary selections. The concert will take place in the War Memorial Gymnasium.

Canadian singer, Murray McLauclan will appear in the SUB ballroom on Friday, Sept. 28, at 8 p.m.

Three members of the UBC Alumni Association —

Four Members of UBC Faculty Die

Four members of the UBC faculty, well known for their involvement in such widely divergent fields as the fine arts, Slavonic studies, criminology and education, have died in recent months.

Mr. Ian S. McNairn, 54, associate professor in the Fine Arts department, was drowned in a boating accident at Saltspring Island on Aug. 20.

Prof. James O. St.-Clair Sobell, first head of UBC's Department of Slavonic Studies from 1946 until he resigned for health reasons in 1965, died on May 1 after a lengthy illness.

Mr. John Fornataro, associate professor in UBC's School of Social Work, died of injuries received when the bus in which he was riding overturned after hitting a tractor near Seville, Spain, on May 2.

Miss Edith Deyell, who retired as associate professor of education in 1972, died on March 7.

Mr. McNairn, a UBC faculty member since 1957, was at his summer home on Saltspring Island when the drowning accident occurred. He had just returned from Florence where he has spent the past year on leave of absence studying early Italian sculpture.

A former curator of UBC's Fine Arts Gallery and an instructor in Medieval arts, Mr. McNairn was widely known for his work in community affairs. He was a former president of the Community Arts Council and was a member of the governing boards of the Arts Club of Vancouver, the Vancouver Art Gallery and the B.C. Arts Board.

NEW president of the Pharmaceutical Association of B.C., the licensing and regulatory body for more than 1,600 B.C. pharmacists, is Prof. Finlay Morrison, associate dean of UBC's Faculty of Pharmaceutical Sciences.

One member of the non-academic Administration — Mr. William White, Deputy President and Bursar.

The terms of reference of the committee are:

1. To form criteria to guide it in the selection of a short list of Presidential candidates, and

2. To make recommendations to the staff committee of the Board of Governors.

Dr. McGavin, in announcing President Gage's intention to resign as President, said the selection of criteria for a new President would be a matter for the advisory committee to consider, but the Board of Governors would prefer to appoint a Canadian, aged 55 or under, and highly regarded in his own discipline.

Under the terms of the Universities Act the Board of Governors has sole responsibility for the appointment of a new president, Dr. McGavin said, but the Board wants to obtain advice, through the advisory committee, from all segments of the University community.

Prof. Sobell, who was 59 at the time of his death, was the head of the Slavonic Studies department during the period when it became the largest of its kind in Canada with a book collection of more than 40,000 volumes and 300 periodicals.

He was a former president of the Canadian Association of Slavists and was elected a fellow of the Royal Society of Canada in 1961. He continued to teach in the Slavonic Studies department after his resignation and had been on sick leave from UBC since January of this year.

Mr. Fornataro, who was well known for his work in the fields of criminology and penology, had been on leave of absence in England and was assumed to have been on a holiday in Spain when the accident in which he died occurred.

Mr. Fornataro, who was 54 at the time of his death, served for five years as director of corrections for the Province of Saskatchewan before joining the UBC faculty in 1957. He served on a number of provincial and federal advisory boards concerned with the penal system and also undertook a number of assignments for the Canadian Corrections Association.

Miss Deyell, who joined the UBC faculty in 1960 to lecture on methods of teaching social studies, was the co-author of three books on the subject of teaching Canadian history and geography.

FACULTY of Education Building at UBC has been renamed the Neville V. Scarfe Building to honor the former dean of the Faculty, pictured above, who retired in June. He will continue teaching geography in the Faculty.
