

Psychologist starts training in interviewing abused children

By PAULA MARTIN

UBC Psychology Professor John Yuille has been contracted by the provincial government to train professionals in interviewing children reported to have been sexually abused.

"Lots of police and child protection workers over the past few years have been thrown into this interview task without proper training. They've gone in with the best of intentions but sometimes make mistakes because they haven't been properly prepared," Yuille said.

"We want to improve the interview procedure so we can improve the likelihood of getting information from the child to allow the case to proceed."

Yuille has developed a program called the Step-wise interview, which provides training in interviewing children and a method for assessing their credibility called Statement Validity Analysis.

He will work with government social workers, RCMP officers and Crown counsel in Burnaby and Prince George during the two-year pilot project and the results will be assessed by an inter-ministry steering committee.

"We are aware of how much child sexual abuse has become an issue and the special needs of children in terms of how they are interviewed and how people go about evaluating their evidence," Yuille said.

Although no statistics are available for B.C., Yuille said that in the U.S., about half the cases of reported child sexual abuse end up being labelled as unfounded.

"It doesn't mean that they are false allegations," Yuille said. "It means that insufficient information was obtained."

Often the children involved in these cases are extremely young, Yuille said. Although professionals can interview children as young as three years of age, it is difficult because their communication skills are still developing, he said.

"Children are suggestible and open to the influence of adults. They can end up being misled if an interviewer isn't careful, so we want to make sure that in the interview procedures we use, we don't end up planting ideas or misleading the children.

"These children have pretty short attention spans and a variety of difficulties, especially if they have been abused."

Evaluating the credibility of children's allegations poses difficulties as well, Yuille said.

"In most of these cases, all you end up with is the word of the child against the denials of the adult. Research suggests that at least 90 per cent of the allegations made by children are true, but, nonetheless some are false."

All of the interviews are recorded — mostly on videotape, but some on audio tape, Yuille said, adding this is becoming standard procedure in the province and reduces the number of times a child has to be interviewed.

The British government has endorsed the Step-wise project and Yuille will be consulting in six U.S. cities where the National Institute of Health is field testing the Step-wise procedure.

President's report on arts released

A special President's Report on the Creative and Performing Arts highlighting the university's historically strong commitment to the cultural life of the province and the nation was released recently.

The report documents the growth of the arts at UBC from its beginnings as an extra-curricular activity under Frederic Wood, who laid the foundation for the current Theatre Department, to its present status as a full member of the university's academic community.

UBC has a long tradition of contributing to the making of art and the study of art through its internationally renowned faculty — professors such as Earle Birney, Robert Silverman and Jeff Wall; by bringing well-known artists to campus such as Dylan Thomas and Yevgeny Yevtushenko; and through its graduates such as Larry Lillo and Richard Ouzounian.

UBC President David Strangway said that "UBC plays a role both seminal and supportive," in Canada's artistic environment. "As the oldest and largest university in British Columbia, we are a crucial component in the arts education system."

Strangway emphasized that UBC is continuing its leading role with the opening of a new creative and performing arts centre partially funded by Vancouver businessmen Tom and Caleb Chan.

"By 1995 we shall have a Creative Arts Building entirely devoted to studio work in our art, music, theatre and film programs," Strangway said.

The report is currently being distributed to all faculty.

High school musicians from B.C. will give a variety of performances on campus during the Pacific Coast Music Festival May 11 and 12.

New dean to promote women in the sciences

As she went through school, Judith Myers never doubted she would become a scientist. Now the UBC professor is working to ensure other women won't be discouraged from taking the same path.

Myers has been appointed to the new position of Associate Dean for the Promotion of Women in Science in the faculties of Science and Agricultural Sciences, where she holds a cross appointment.

She begins the two-year term July 1.

Myers wants to make the academic environment a more inviting place for women, encourage female students to continue their studies and see that job applicants are given a fair shake.

Science Dean Barry McBride, who initiated the new position, said there is an unprecedented opportunity for women to enter science at a time when job prospects have rarely been so promising.

"But at the same time we must take steps to ensure that women are encouraged to pursue their careers without facing undue obstacles and barriers," he said.

As a graduate student, Myers felt the sting of male rebuke first-hand when a prominent scientist told her that her research project was too important to be left to a woman.

"That just made me mad and even more determined to continue," said Myers, a population ecologist who holds appointments as a full professor in the departments of Zoology and Plant Science.

Myers

One of Myers' first priorities is to bring more women onto faculty. Today there are only 11 female tenure track professors in the 11 Science depart-

Soccer team heads to U.S., Mexico for world tourney

UBC's men's soccer team is up against international competition this month.

They are competing in the World Collegiate Soccer Championships in Juarez, Mexico and Las Cruces, New Mexico, April 19 to 22.

Eight teams, each champions in their country or league, will compete for the world title, defended by last year's champions, Indiana University. Three other teams are also from the U.S. The remaining are from West Germany, Brazil, and Mexico.

UBC's soccer team earned its spot in the international area by placing first in Canadian Inter-university Athletic Union competition this season.

Overall, UBC put 25 men's and women's teams representing 17 different sports into competition this year. The women's field hockey team and men's cross country team won bronze medals in CIAU competition and 20 individual athletes won CIAU performance medals.

UBC student Erika Forster broke the women's triple jump record and Allen Klassen set a new record in the 1500 metre event at the CIAU Track and Field championships in Winnipeg last month. In all, 25 UBC athletes were declared CIAU conference all-stars—outstanding players in conference competition—and 18 were named to the prestigious All Canadian list, which recognizes outstanding players across the country.

UBC's athletic teams have won more CIAU championship titles, 27, than any other Canadian university, except the University of Toronto, which has won 56, since the inception of the CIAU in 1961.

The University of Victoria is tied with the University of Western Ontario for third place with 20 championships.

UBC also plays host to more teams from outside North America than any other Canadian university. This season, the Soviet junior national women's volleyball team wrapped up a North American tour at UBC, and the Estonian National men's volleyball team visited UBC for a major tournament against top American and Canadian university teams.

When the men's soccer team from Doshisha University in Kyoto, Japan visited UBC this season, all its games were broadcast on Japanese television.

Committee ponders discipline for engineering students

By JO MOSS

At least five of the students involved in the engineering undergraduate society newsletter have met the university's disciplinary committee.

At the time UBC Reports went to print, the seven-member committee, headed by Albert McClean, Associate Vice-President Academic, was scheduled to meet with the final student on April 12.

UBC President David Strangway will likely receive recommendations from the committee soon after the Easter weekend, McClean said.

Students have the option of meeting with the president personally to discuss those recommendations. The final decision on discipline rests with the president under the University's Act.

Disciplinary procedures recommended could range from no action to indefinite suspension from the university, McClean said.

Students may appeal the president's decision to the university's Senate committee on student appeals on academic discipline.

Meanwhile, UBC is withholding collection of fees from the Engineering Undergraduate Society. No further action has been taken against the EUS to date.

UBC's Alma Mater Society has voted to uphold a student court ruling to fine the EUS $15,000 for publishing the offensive newsletter.

The EUS was asked to and published a full-page apology in the March 30 issue of the student newspaper The Ubyssy.

Signed by newly elected EUS President Daren Sanders, the apology outlined a commitment to eliminating prejudice in any form on campus.

It said the EUS would organize a potlatch in conjunction with the Native community in November; organize a conference to deal with discrimination issues; and establish an effective editorial review policy for future publications.

Krajina honored by Czechoslovakia

Botany Professor Emeritus Vladimir Krajina was presented with the nation's highest honor and given a hero's welcome last month when he returned to his homeland of Czechoslovakia after an enforced absence of 42 years.

Newly elected Czech president Vaclav Havel gave Krajina the Order of the White Lion in recognition of his heroics with the Second World War resistance movement.

Krajina, 85, was the leader of the unified Czech resistance movement, supplying the Allied powers with invaluable intelligence information until he was captured and sent to a concentration camp.

After the war, Krajina served in the Czechoslovakian parliament until the Communist takeover forced him to flee in 1948. He was tried in absentia as a traitor and sentenced to 25 years imprisonment.

It was not until the Communist party recently loosened its grip on power that Krajina's achievements were publicly recognized in Czechoslovakia.

Parking fees increasing

Parking rates for faculty, staff and students will rise for the first time since 1984 if the Board of Governors approves a proposal from Parking and Security Services.

Annual rates for faculty and staff will increase to $120, an increase of $24. Students' preferred parking will be $72 a year, a rise of $12.

As well, parking in B lots will cost

15 cents an hour. Currently, the cost is 25 cents per day.

As part of a plan to beef up security on campus, attendants will now be on duty in all B lots, said John Smithman, director of Parking and Security Services.

The increases are part of a five-year parking plan going to the board at its next meeting on May 2.

ments, three per cent of total faculty members.

"That's the first step, ensuring there are more women at the faculty level," she said. "It helps to create a friendlier atmosphere and provides role models for students."

She hopes this will help counter the trend that sees the proportion of women in Canada's academic community drop rapidly, for example, from a high of 50 or 60 per cent in undergraduate biological sciences to 30 per cent of graduate students and 15 per cent of university faculty. Proportions of females in physical sciences are even lower.

Myers will look at procedures used in advertising new positions and selecting job candidates. She feels there is room to add a "positive bias" into the interviewing process.

She stops short of advocating affirmative action quotas, although she notes such programs have been in place at U.S. universities for nearly 20 years.

Myers believes hiring women on any basis other than their abilities will condemn them to second class status as scientists.

Women already battle the prevailing view that scientists must not interrupt their research to raise a family or risk falling behind others in their field, she said. As a mother of two, she feels this attitude must change.

"I think it has to be recognized when considering tenured positions and grant funding that there may be times when a women's productivity will not be as high as their male colleagues," she said.

"But I am convinced that, given the chance, the productivity of women over their careers will compare favorably to that of male scientists."

Needs of disabled

Editor,

Re: Researchers trying to build more efficient wheelchair.

The above article in the March 8, 1990 issue of UBC Reports starts with the sentence, "If people with disabilities were better matched to their wheelchairs..." This, and the rest of the article, propagates the mistaken notion that all disabled people need wheelchairs.

This idea does a tremendous disservice to the many other visually, hearing, learning, etc., disabled people, many of whom feel ignored by the media. A portion of mobility disabled people need wheelchairs, and the existing project described in the article is about them. But please, do not equate the needs of the "disabled" as being wheelchair needs. There are many other disabilities, and many, many unfulfilled needs.

Discover Summer shares campus

This summer, UBC is preparing to share one of the best-kept secrets in the city.

It's our campus. Lush with greenery and summer flowers, cooled by ocean breezes, the university is a peaceful and relatively unexplored oasis right on the city's doorstep.

As part of the university's 75th anniversary celebrations, the invitation is out to Discover Summer at UBC and visit campus to enjoy sports, picnics, concerts, theatre, exhibitions and many other events and activities.

One of the biggest events of the summer is sure to be the SUPER Sale to be held July 28 at MacInnes field.

SUPER stands for Special University Program to Encourage Recycling, and organizers hope to make it the world's largest yard sale.

Members of campus clubs and departments, alumni, students and their friends and families are invited to set up tables and sell items from home such as books, toys, records, tools and lamps.

Larger items from campus — computers, furniture, scientific and audio-visual equipment — will be sold by SERF, the Surplus Equipment Recycling Facility. An auction will sell specialty items donated by departments and alumni celebrities.

Live music and street entertainers will lend a festive air while displays will promote environmental awareness and recycling.

In the spirit of recycling, admission to the sale will be 12 aluminum cans. Or, if you prefer, one loony.

Registration forms and other details for the events have been circulated to all UBC departments. For information call 228-5552.

Another way to discover UBC this year is the Summer Campus Tour Program which will be enlarged and improved for 1990. Added to the twice-daily walking tours that escort thousands of visitors around campus each year will be specialized tours for children, the disabled, seniors, tourists, families and other groups.

Summer theatre students will entertain children during some of the tours. Posing as a travelling company of players, they will perform the traditional fable Androcles and the Lion in an informal outdoor setting.

Also this summer, lovers of the outdoors will get a rare opportunity to explore the UBC/Malcolm Knapp Research forest in Maple Ridge.

The research facility will lift its ban on vehicles for the first and perhaps only time on Saturday, June 23 to allow the public to take a driving tour of the 5,153-hectare site.

Visitors will be guided through a set route to view old growth forests, displays of logging equipment and feature areas that highlight current forestry research. The forest, with its spectacular backcountry views and quiet lakes, abounds with wildlife.

Later in the summer, the Museum of Anthropology will host a unique photo exhibition called Our Chiefs and Elders: Photographs by

Expanded program for summer theatre

Visitors wanting to discover what UBC has to offer during the summer months can expect to find some of the finest summer theatre in Vancouver here on campus.

An expanded program featuring three plays will be presented by the UBC Summer Players, an outstanding company of performers drawn from the university's Theatre Department.

The UBC Summer Players will open their 25th anniversary season with Androcles and the Lion, commencing May 9. Performances will take place outside the Student Union Building at approximately noon every Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

Filthy Rich, the comedy/mystery about a bitter, washed-up investigative reporter forced into an adventure of a life time is scheduled to open June 8.

Written by acclaimed Canadian playwright George F. Walker, Filthy Rich will be directed by the Theatre Department's own Denis Johnston.

The Strange Case of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde follows, beginning

June 22.

The UBC Summer Players production of the tale based on Robert Louis Stevenson's classic novel about the forces of good and evil, will be a Canadian premier.

A repertory run is scheduled during June and July for Filthy Rich and The Strange Case of Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde, allowing visitors on brief stays in Vancouver the opportunity to enjoy both productions.

The shows will run Thursday through Saturday and Monday evenings on alternating weeks.

Celebrate 75th with a picnic

UBC Food Services want life on campus to be a picnic during the university's 75th anniversary summer. From intimate affairs for two to corporate barbecues for 500, the Picnics on the Point program will offer fare suitable for a variety of tastes and budgets. The idea is to invite the community, as well as faculty, staff and students, to enjoy the summer scenery and facilities at UBC along with a prepared meal delivered to a selected spot on campus.

Food Services director Christine Samson hopes the summer picnics will become a yearly event. "What we're offering are complete picnic packages. If you want to take that special someone to a romantic spot, we have a deluxe basket for $30 that features Tarragon baked chicken, smoked salmon, Camembert cheese with David Neel, Kwaguitl.

It features portraits of B.C. Native leaders, chiefs, chief counselors and elders taken by Native photographer David Neel.

The exhibition is believed to be the first photographic project of its kind — a collaborative, all-Native project involving chiefs, elders and artist.

The exhibition will open Aug. 9-11 at the Tenth Annual Elders Conference being hosted by the Squamish Nation in North Vancouver. Many of those portrayed in the photographs will be attending the conference.

The exhibition then moves to the museum where it opens Aug. 17.

For seniors and early retired people aged 55 or over, the Centre for Continuing Education is offering its annual lecture program May 28 to June 22.

The program consists of short lecture courses on a variety of topics taught by UBC faculty. The program began in 1974 and has been held annually ever since. About 400 seniors sign up each summer.

UBC is also the site of the inaugural ManuLife's Ride for Heart Sunday, April 29. Starting on campus, cyclists ride an easy 52-kilometre route around Vancouver on a police monitored course.

To take part, cyclists line up sponsors with donations raised going to the B.C. and Yukon Heart Foundation to fund research.

If that whets your appetite for sports, then UBC is the place for you this summer.

Cycling, soccer, golf, ice hockey are offered for adults by the Community Sport Program through the Athletics Department. Kids aged 5 to 16 can enjoy everything from fencing, gymnastics and badminton to soccer, hockey and track and field.

About 5,000 participants and their families are expected to take advantage of the sports program.

Other events lined up for Discover Summer include a Mother's Day tea at Cecil Green Park house, the 75th anniversary alumni awards on May 9, an international gathering of male choirs in July and the Canadian Special Olympics July 10-15.

Theatre's fashion show has champagne theme

The gowns are being fitted and the trouser creases pressed as the Theatre Department prepares for its Champagne Celebration: 75 Years of Fashion, on April 29.

The theatrical fashion show, built around a champagne theme, will raise scholarship funds for the Theatre Department's design and technical students. The two-part production will showcase 75 years of fashion as part of UBC's diamond anniversary year celebrations.

"The show will have a real theatrical feel to it," said coordinator Mara Gottler, an assistant professor in costume design in the Theatre Department. "It's not just clothing on display. Each costume will be set into its particular period context."

Vancouver Museum costume historian Ivan Sayers will provide commentary on clothing worn between 1915 and 1990 and on fashion that originated in Canada.

"Ivan's narration will put the clothing into a social and historical context," Gottler added. "Our approach is a mixture of sophistication and humor."

Complementary champagne will be served to the audience during intermission by Theatre Department students attired in 1915 finery. Students are also designing the set, lights and sound for the show, managing the house, serving as models and ushering guests.

Much of the period clothing has been donated by Sayers and the rest will come from the department's antique wardrobe storage.

A Champagne Celebration: 75 Years of Fashion will take place in the Frederic Wood Theatre on Sunday, April 29 at 3 p.m. Tickets for the fundraiser are $25 and are available by calling the Frederic Wood Theatre box office, 228-2678.

Students preparing for music festival

About 5,000 high school students representing about 150 of B.C.'s best high school music groups are gathering at UBC Friday and Saturday May 11 and 12 for the Pacific Coast Music Festival.

An annual event, it is being held at UBC for the first time as part of the university's Discover Summer at UBC program.

Now in its fourth year, the festival will offer the public a smorgasbord of amateur musical talent—jazz bands, concert and jazz choirs, concert bands and small jazz ensembles—at different campus venues.

"It's a celebration of music, a sharing, and an opportunity for the students to appreciate and learn from others and make their performance," said Kerry Turner, festival chair.

Pacific Coast Music Festival is an umbrella organization committed to supporting music education in the province. Turner emphasizes that the event is education-oriented—not a competition.

Festival organizers bring in music adjudicators and educators, "The best people we can," Turner said, to help students and their group leaders improve their performance.

The students have been nominated from 18 regional festivals scattered around the province. For them it's a chance to enjoy the excitement and challenge of performance, share ideas with other high schools, make new friends with similar interests and learn from musical experts.

Pacific Coast Music Festival is affiliated with MusicFest, a national educational music festival to be held in Winnipeg on May 14. B.C.'s nominated groups can choose to attend, but many opt for the experience closer to home to minimize costs, Turner said.

Next year's national festival, the 15th annual, is scheduled to be held in Vancouver.

Sounds of music to fill summer

The campus will be filled with the sounds of music this summer as two popular concert series return and UBC gains a new ensemble to add to its already rich musical heritage.

One of the musical high points of Discover Summer — and a lasting legacy for the university — is the creation of the UBC Summer Strings.

This chamber orchestra is a select group of 15 student string players from the School of Music, co-directed by faculty members Geoffrey Michaels and Eric Wilson.

The Summer Strings realizes

"a long-held dream of establishing a student orchestra on campus during summer to provide intensive training for students intent upon performing careers," said School of Music Director Bill Benjamin.

It is hoped this year's initiative will lead to an ongoing summer chamber orchestra program, giving music students an opportunity for summer jobs in their own field.

As well as providing employment, the Summer Strings will allow students to hone their skills to superior levels while earning university credit.

Full-length evening concerts of the Summer Strings are scheduled for 8 p.m. on May 10 and 24. Lunch-hour performances are at 12:30 p.m. on May 9 and 16, 23 and 30. All concerts will be held in the Recital Hall.

Also this summer, two popular music programs — Summer

Sounds and Music for A Summer's Evening — return to campus in expanded formats to salute the university's 75th anniversary.

Music for a Summer's Evening is a free series of 10 concerts held in the Recital Hall during the Summer Session on Tuesday and Thursday evenings beginning July 5.

The concerts feature some of the leading chamber musicians from the School of Music faculty and the Vancouver area, many of them UBC graduates.

Already scheduled to perform are the Purcell String Quartet, pianist Robert Silverman and a summer band directed by Martin Berinbaum.

When it began, Music For A Summer's Evening was the only chamber music concert series in Vancouver. It still plays to standing room only houses at each performance.

Summer Sounds is a series of free noon hour concerts held daily on the south plaza of the Student Union Building during July 3 to Aug. 10.

Musical formats include light pop-rock, country, traditional and modern jazz and classical music, including string and brass quartets from the School of Music.

This summer, the School of Music is also playing host to the Taipei Sinfonieta from Taiwan in concert on Friday, July 20 at 8 p.m. in the Recital Hall.

The Sinfonieta is a group of about 30 players under the baton of American conductor Michael Masur. It includes some UBC alumni among its members.

Asian art exhibit set for May 1-27

Art lovers won't want to miss B.C. Asian Images: Selected Works, one of the highlights of Discover Summer at UBC.

The Asian Art Exhibit runs from May 1-27, except Mondays, from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the Asian Centre Auditorium. Admission is free.

The exhibit showcases paintings by Liang Shih-Feng, Letty Shea, Johnson Susing Chow, Kei Szeto, Gu Mei and Tinyen Chen, six of Vancouver's finest Asian artists. These artists have all studied with masters of Chinese art and have been acclaimed as outstanding, traditional Chinese artists.

The paintings feature landscapes, flowers and animals and are done in a variety of mediums including watercolors, oils and Chinese ink.

Many of the paintings will be for sale and a catalog of artists' works and biographies will also be available for purchase.

One of the highlights of the exhibit will be a chance to meet the artists and discuss their work at a special reception on Saturday, May 5 from 3 p.m. to 6 p.m. in the Asian Centre Auditorium. Admission is free and light refreshments will be served.

All six artists will be available to discuss their work and some of the principles of Chinese painting such as painting according to true colors, with a strong and forceful brushstroke and with a liveliness in tone and content.

For further information on the B.C. Asian Images Art Exhibit call 228-2746.

Report of the President's Permanent Advisory Committee on Sexual Harassment

Introduction

In June 1986, President Strangway established an Ad Hoc Committee to develop a policy on sexual harassment for U.B.C. This Committee met with many interested groups and received several submissions on the two prepared draft statements. Following this consultative process, the Committee formulated a final report which the President submitted to the Board of Governors for approval in February, 1988.

This Policy called for the establishment of the President's Permanent Advisory Committee on Sexual Harassment with terms of reference which can be summarized as follows: To develop and implement an educational program on sexual harassment; to advise the President on the appointment of advisors, mediators and hearing panel members, and to provide for the instruction of these individuals; to provide assistance to the advisors and to those individuals who have complaints lodged against them; to investigate complaints and decide if there is evidence to justify a formal hearing; to submit an annual report and to advise the President on changes to the University policy on sexual harassment.

The President's Advisory Committee was appointed during the summer of 1988 and the Committee met 19 times during the first year. This report covers the activities of the Committee during the period October 1988 to October 1989.

Education Program

In November, 1988 an Education Sub-Committee was formed with a mandate to develop an educational program on sexual harassment for the University community. This Sub-committee designed, produced and distributed brochures and posters explaining UBC's policy on sexual harassment and the procedures for dealing with it. Information about UBC's policy has also appeared in the Ubysey and UBC Reports.

The Sub-committee has collected information from other universities about their sexual harassment programs and this information is available in the Advisor's Office.

The Advisors met with student groups during the fall term to inform UBC students about the policy and procedures.

Additional small group information sessions are planned.

It was decided that one very important aspect of the Sexual Harassment Policy is to ensure that the faculty, staff and students at UBC understand what constitutes sexual harassment.

Members of the UBC community come from widely different backgrounds and occasionally individuals do not appreciate the effect of their actions or comments on others. The Committee hopes that every one will study the description of sexual harassment as outlined in the Policy or the brochure.

Appointment of Officials

A second Sub-committee responsible for advising on the appointment of individuals to implement the University policy was formed. This Sub-committee reviewed over 60 nominations for the two positions of policy advisors. The Advisors have the major responsibility for the education program and for handling all inquiries and complaints of sexual harassment at UBC. In the spring of 1989, the President appointed Margaretha Hoek and Jon Shapiro as Policy Advisors.

Our Policy provides the opportunity for informal resolution of sexual harassment complaints by the parties themselves. Initially, the Advisors can facilitate this process.

In addition, the President has appointed five mediators, whose sole responsibility under the Policy is to mediate sexual harassment complaints within the University, when called upon by the individuals involved.

If the advisors and mediators are unable to resolve a complaint, the matter can be taken to a formal hearing before a three-person Hearing Committee chosen from the members of the Hearing Panel.

Fifteen members of the Hearing Panel have been appointed both from within and outside the University community.

Sexual Harassment Complaints

In general most sexual harassment cases are handled by the Policy Advisors. During the period from April 1 to October 30, 1989, the advisors answered several inquiries and 11 cases resulted. The majority of these cases have been resolved at the informal stages of our procedures. These cases can be summarized as follows: Complainant: female—9, male—2; undergraduate student—5, graduate student—3, faculty member—2, other/unknown—1. Respondent: female—2, male 9; undergraduate student—1, graduate student—2, staff member—1, faculty member—7. The disposition of these cases is as follows: informal resolution—9, union grievance—1, in process—1. These cases could be classified as follows: quid pro quo—2, poisoned environment—6, sexual assault—2.

The President and the Board of Governors requested that the Committee review the "Red Menace" and recommend action to the Board. The Committee concluded that specific articles in the "Red Menace" did constitute sexual harassment and the Committee recommended that the University require organizations from within the University to take full responsibility for ensuring that their publications do not violate the University's Policy on Sexual Harassment. This was approved by the Board and they authorized the President to take remedial and/or disciplinary action should violations of the University Policy on Sexual Harassment occur in future publications.

Policy Issues

During the past year, the President's Advisory Committee has also reviewed several policy issues and details of implementation, including record keeping, the right of a third party to lodge a complaint, the right to withdraw a complaint, the rights of the respondent, the definition of sexual harassment, chair-person for the formal hearings, and complaints laid in bad faith. As the Committee gains experience, it is expected that these issues will be reviewed.

Committee Members

Kogila Adam-Moodley (Social & Educational Studies), Lillian Alexus (Graduate Student Society—Nursing), Olga Cragg (Faculty Association (French)), Lisa Eckman (Alma Mater Society), Gillian England (T.A. Union—English), David Elkins (Political Science), Michael Hartwick (Internal Audit), Philip Hill (Mechanical Engineering), Bill Kadey (International Union of Operating Engineers #882), Libby Kay (Extra Sessional Studies—Association of Administrative & Professional Staff), Donald MacDougall (Faculty of Law), Larry Weiler (Chemistry—Chair-person), Nadine Wilson (Physiology) and Suzanne Young (Graduate Student Society—Geography).
