Fonds Description

School of Family and Nutritional Sciences fonds. – 1923-1998.

1.83 m of textual records and other materials.

Administrative History

Pressure to establish a Home Economics course at the University of British Columbia began as early as 1923. By the mid-1920s the Provincial Parent-Teacher Federation mounted a campaign amongst B.C. women to establish a degree course at UBC. The organization initiated a fund to endow a chair and by 1927 it had reached $11,000. The money came in small donations from across the province and public demand for a program continued to accelerate. In response, the University instituted a Home Economics Degree Course in 1931, but deep cuts in University funding the following year resulted in the temporary suspension of the course. The Provincial Parent-Teachers Federation established a permanent committee in 1933 to oversee the use of the development fund which continued to grow. The committee provided bursaries to eight students who had begun the UBC program to complete their education at another university. In 1943, the Senate and Board of Governors approved the re-establishment of the course at the earliest possible moment. The Parent-Teacher Federation turned over $20,000 to the University in 1945 to help finance the construction and furnishing of facilities on campus. Finally, after holding classes in the campus army huts and enduring a terrible fire in 1948, the new Home Economics Building opened in September 1949.

Dorothy Lefebvre served as the first head of the Department of Home Economics. She resigned within a few years and was replaced by Charlotte Black who served as director until the 1960s. In 1951, the status of the program changed as it became the School of Home Economics, part of the Faculty of Arts and Science. It moved to a new building near the UBC Bookstore on East Mall in 1982, and was re-named the School of Family and Nutritional Sciences in 1984. Administrative responsibility for the School was transferred to the Faculty of Agricultural Sciences in 1992, following an earlier academic review which recommended that the dietetics and nutrition programs be relocated in a science-based faculty. There was strong support for the move, and there were already a number of close links between the School and Agricultural Sciences, particularly between in the School's nutritional sciences program and the programs in the Faculty's departments of Food Science and Animal Science. By 1992 the School was offering a Dietetics program leading to a BSc (Dietet.) degree, a Family Science major leading to a BA degree, a Home Economics program leading to a BHE degree, a Nutritional Sciences major leading to a BSc degree, an MA in Family Studies, and MSc and PhD degrees in Human Nutrition. The School was discontinued in 1999 -- the dietetics and nutrition programs remained within the Faculty of Agricultural Sciences, while the family studies program was transferred to the School of Social Work.

Custodial History

The scrapbook and cash book originally belonged to the Home Economics Permanent Committee of the B.C. Parent-Teacher Federation, while some of the early correspondence and printed material which originated at UBC was collected by Charlotte Black for the Department. These were transferred to the Library by Dr. Black in 1957. The rest of the fonds was transferred to the University Archives by the School of Family and Nutritional Sciences in 2001.

Scope and Content

The fonds consists of correspondence, reports, financial materials, bound volumes, newspaper clippings, appointment notices, applications, minutes, course outlines, questionnaires, and photographs pertaining to the origins, development and administration of the School of Family and Nutritional Sciences and its predecessors.

Also includes 3 scrapbooks, 3 photograph albums, 97 photographic prints, 89 photographic slides, and 1 videocassette.

Notes

Fonds consists of institutional records – access requests must be reviewed by the University's FOIPOP Coordinator.

File list available.
