Biographical Sketch

William Carleton Gibson was born in Ottawa in 1913. His parents, the former Belle Crawford Magee and John Wesley Gibson, left Ottawa for Victoria when his father took a position as head of the Normal School in Victoria. Gibson graduated from Victoria High School before attending Victoria College and moved to Vancouver to complete a bachelor's degree, graduating with UBC's first commerce class in 1933.

After the Depression and inspired by the work of Sir William Osler, Gibson began medical studies in Montreal at McGill University, Osler's alma mater. In 1934 he was offered research fellowship at Prof. Wilder Penfield's Montreal Neurological Institute. Gibson went to Oxford the following year as a histology demonstrator, appointed by Sir Charles Sherrington. From Oxford, Gibson embarked on a medical tour of Europe, seeing first-hand preparations in Nazi Germany for the coming war. He investigated neurological cases at the Sorbonne in Paris and surveyed the clinical treatment of nervous diseases in the Soviet Union at Leningrad. In 1936, while traveling in the Basque Country in Spain, Gibson was stranded by the military uprising which would eventually become the Spanish Civil War. Dr. Gibson escaped aboard USS Oklahoma, a battleship sunk five years later during the attack on Pearl Harbor.

Gibson completed a Masters of Science from McGill in 1936, a doctorate from Oxford in 1938, and, lastly, a medical degree from McGill in 1941. Gibson also served during the war in the clinical investigations unit of the Royal Canadian Air Force, engaging in night-vision experiments, as well as conducting tests on methods of removing nitrogen from the joints of high-altitude flyers. He became deputy director of medical research with the RCAF. After the war, Gibson was senior medical officer for 19 Wing (Auxiliary).

In 1945 Gibson returned to the Montreal Neurological Institute but soon returned traveling taking positions in San Francisco and Australia. Returning to British Columbia, Gibson was a researcher and clinical Associate Professor at UBC when the Faculty of Medicine opened, and soon after became Director of the Kinsmen Laboratory for Neurological Research. In the 1950s he was a member of the UBC Senate and also President of the Faculty Association. From 1960 to 1978 he served as a professor and

Head of the History of Medicine and Science Department. As a neurology professor, he initiated studies into the biochemistry of schizophrenia and acrodynia (pink disease), also establishing a laboratory to monitor the brain waves of patients.

At UBC, Gibson was instrumental in encouraging P.A. Woodward, son of the founder of the Woodward's chain of department stores, to help create the Woodward Biomedical Library. Gibson's friendship with Cecil Green, a founder of Texas Instruments and a former student at UBC, led to the purchase in 1967 of a mansion adjacent to the campus, Cecil Green Park and the establishment of Green College, UBC and Oxford.

Gibson was also active in local politics. In 1968, he helped found The Electors Action Movement (TEAM), a moderate and reformist municipal party in Vancouver. He ran for mayor under the party's banner two years later but lost to Tom Campbell. In 1972, Dr. Gibson won election to city council as TEAM captured nine of 11 council seats, including Art Phillips in the mayor's chair. Gibson also served two terms as an alderman in the late 1970s and was involved in ensuring the protection of parkland in British Columbia, including at Van Dusen Gardens and on Bowen Island.

An extensive and successful publishing career which included biographies of Sherrington, the Spanish neuroscientist Santiago Ramon y Cajal, and UBC's first president Frank Wesbrook, was bookended by two volumes: Young Endeavour, in 1958, a look at precocious contributions to science by medical students, and Old Endeavour, in 2007, snapshot biographies of physicians whose accomplishments occurred beyond age 65. Gibson was 93 on the book's publication.

In 1985, Gibson was named chancellor of the University of Victoria, the successor to Victoria College, where he had studied a half-century earlier. He was chair of the Universities' Council of British Columbia, chairman of the Scientific Advisory Committee of the US Muscular Dystrophy Association, board member of the International Brain Research Organization, fellow of the Royal Society of Medicine in London, a distinguished member of the Osler Society and, more recently, regent of the International Association for Humanitarian Medicine. Gibson was appointed a member of the Order of Canada in 2002, matching an honour bestowed a decade earlier on his brother, James Alexander Gibson. Gibson, whose hobbies included collecting plants, imported from the Aegean island of Cos seeds from the sycamore under which Hippocrates is said to have taught. Six-story-tall sycamores now grow in Victoria and Vancouver from these seeds. Gibson died on July 5, 2009 in Victoria, BC.

Scope and Content

The fonds consists of research material on a variety of medical and historical topics as well as research for a number of Gibson's books and articles including his books about UBC's first president Frank F. Wesbrook, Ramon y Cajal, Sherrington, and his books New Endeavour and Old Endeavour. The fonds includes manuscripts of a number of Gibson articles and speeches as well as chapters from some of his books, records from Woodward Health Science centre and documents for the history of the Faculty of medicine, and related to Green College UBC and Oxford. Also included are records from the Agricultural Science Fund Committee (1967-1974), School of Rehabilitation Medicine (1953-1961), Master Teaching Awards Committee (1967-1972), minutes from the Council of the Faculty of Medicine (1950-1964), materials relating to Vancouver civic politics (1970-1984), and correspondence with Sir Frederick Dainton (1980-1983), Cecil Green, and Wilder Penfield among many others.

Notes

File list included.

The first accession of records resulted in 80 cm of textual records (Boxes 1-3) and occurred in 2001. The second accession, a donation by Gibson's family, occurred in 2010. Where possible, the creator's arrangement has been maintained.
