Introduction

This inventory describes the records of the Anglo British Columbia Packing Company. The fond consists of 250 linear feet of financial records and correspondence relating to main office activities and the daily operations of fish canneries on the British Columbia coast between 1891 and 1968. Financial records from the cannery sites make up the bulk of the fonds while main office correspondence measures 8 linear feet. The records date from 1891 to 1968 and were acquired by the University of British Columbia's Special Collections between 1970 and 1972.

There are no restrictions on this material.

Administrative History

In 1889, Henry Ogle Bell-Irving acquired options on nine operating fish canneries: seven on the Fraser River and two on the Skeena River. On 14 April 1891, Bell-Irving purchased a Prospectus for $330,000. Later that year on the 22 December, the Anglo-British Columbia Packing company was incorporated in Middlesex, England. Bell-Irving's firm, then named Bell-Irving and Patterson, was appointed first Managing and Selling Agents. They maintained a head-office for the company in Vancouver, and titular head-office in London, England.

In 1894, the Anglo-British Columbia Packing Company began expansion of their operations by constructing the Good Hope Cannery on Rivers Inlet. In 1895, H.O. Bell-Irving and Company assumed sole Managing and Selling Agent responsibilities. Also in that year, the Anglo-British Columbia Packing Company established the Fidalgo Island Packing Company, which remained a subsidiary until 1964, when it was sold.

In 1931, after the death of H.O. Bell-Irving, the management of the Anglo-British Columbia Packing Company was assumed by Bell-Irving's son Richard and Peter Traill, both former directors. In 1966, the company expanded its operations to Caraquet, New Brunswick, where it built a herring reduction plant. The Anglo-British Columbia Packing Company sold the salmon cannery business in 1969, yet continued to operate the herring reduction plant until 1974, when the company folded completely.

Scope and Content Notes

The records of the Anglo-British Columbia Packing Company were acquired by the University of British Columbia's Special Collections between 1969 and 1972. There is no accession documentation for this fonds, and the name of the donor and reasons for transfer to this institution unknown.

The fonds covers 40 metre of records, relating to the daily operations of 9 canneries on the British Columbia coast. The bulk of the material is financial records and operating created between 1891 and 1968 at the main office in Vancouver, and more often respective cannery sites. On-site record series include Fishermen's Accounts, Correspondence and Payroll. Series from the Vancouver office include Statements, Correspondence and Payroll records. The majority of this information is contained in oversize, bound volumes and unbound registers. The correspondence is contained in eight one-cubic foot boxes. This fond is related to other fonds generated by H.O. Bell-Irving and Company, such as the H.O. Bell-Irving Insurance Company.

The original order of the material has not been retained and no attempt has been made to physically group the items according to assumed series. However, the records have been arranged intellectually; alphabetically by form of material. The records are described at the series level within the subgroups, which are as follows:

Anglo-British Columbia Packing Company (1891-1966);
Alert Bay Plant (1947-1968);
Boswell Cannery (1924-1934);
Caledonia Cannery (1928-1959);
Seymour Cannery (1911-1913);
Good Hope Cannery (1895-1968);
Knight Inlet Canner (1924-1961);
McTavish Cannery (1923-1939);
North Pacific Cannery (1937-1958);
Phoenix and Britannia Canneries (1915-1967).

Minutes and series related to legal transactions of the company's main office, as opposed those series directly related the daily operations of individual canneries, were received by the Vancouver City Archives in 1984 and 1986 as direct gifts from Ian Bell-Irving. These records include Land Transfers from 1861, but the majority of the items were created between 1891 and 1969.

In 1989 Special Collections transferred 75 linear feet of records to the offices of the Northcoast Marine Museum Society in Port Edward, B.C. This material included invoices, journal and cash vouchers generated at the Arrandale and North Pacific Canneries between 1922 and 1961. The items were deaccessioned by the university because their information was judged to be exist on the documents.

There are no restrictions on this fonds.
