REPORT OF THE UNIVERSITY LIBRARIAN TO SENATE

1961/62

Standing squarely between the University of British Columbia and the excellence we all desire for her is the matter of a research library. In breadth of academic program and in number of students, we are comparable to the University of Toronto and the major institutions in the United States; but despite marked gains in recent years, the Library still lags. Our expenditures for library purposes and our book collections, both only from one half to one third those of our sister universities in Toronto and Seattle, are not equal to the task; annual book purchases of less than $240,000 take us farther from, rather than closer to, our goal. On a scale in which the size of Harvard's collections equals 100, Yale is 66, Illinois 50, Toronto 25, and the University of British Columbia 8. Inadequate library resources also restrict the development of a strong faculty. Top scholars are reluctant to come to, and to remain at, a campus lacking the book collections for effective work. Unfortunately a lack of books is not our only library deficiency--both number of staff and physical facilities need to be strengthened considerably. A brief review of the past ten years at the University of British Columbia may help to place our present library problems in proper perspective.

Decade in Review

Few libraries on the American continent can match the splendid record of growth of the University of British Columbia during the past ten years. Book collections have doubled--from 250,000 volumes to over 500,000; books charged out to readers have tripled--from 219,262 to 594,240; expenditures for books and periodicals have tripled--from $80,000 to $240,000; the Library staff has more than doubled in size--from 49 to 113; and, finally, a handsome and spacious new wing has been added to the building. But despite this extraordinary growth, it is doubtful whether the Library serves its users as well today as it did ten years ago.

Unfinished work and unfilled requests for service exist throughout the Library. Almost 4,000 books ordered by members of the faculty last year were not purchased because of lack of funds; for the same reason, subscriptions were placed for fewer than half of the periodicals recommended. As this report is being written--midway in the current fiscal period--many departments have already expended their entire book allotments. By the end of the year, the Library will have 6,000 unhonored requests for books.

The need for additional staff and more space is equally pressing. Our book and periodical ordering processes are in arrears; 4,000 recently acquired books and several major collections are awaiting cataloguing; unconscionably long queues of readers are daily in evidence at most of our service counters; and, during many hours of the day, students seek in vain for a seat in the Library. For its 14,000 students, the University can provide but 1,800 seats--less than one half the recommended number.

The reasons for the present inadequacy of the Library are familiar to all. During the same period that the Library was increasing at an unprecedented rate, the University as a whole was experiencing a comparable growth. Enrollment tripled--from 5,500 students to 13,000; the number of full-time faculty more than doubled--from 325 to 701; several entire faculties, numerous departments, and countless courses were added; new buildings rose on every side.

While increases in the size of the University were neutralizing gains made within the Library, a second development--the emergence of research and graduate study--was creating the need for a much more extensive form of library service which we were poorly equipped to provide. Ten years ago only a handful of departments within the University offered the doctoral degree and fewer yet granted it. Research in the sciences was only beginning and, for the other disciplines, it was yet to come. Today, most of the sciences have active graduate programs, and the social sciences and the humanities are initiating them. A serious impediment to the development of many of these programs, however, is the lack of books in the library. Two or three new graduate programs, particularly in the social sciences and the humanities, frequently require more books than are needed for an entire undergraduate program. Providing the necessary books and periodicals will require the expenditure of large sums of money.

During the past several years, a time in which proportionately more funds were needed for library purposes, proportionately fewer funds were actually spent. Between 1956 and 1961, the percentage of the University's expenditures that went for the Library dropped from 5.1 to 4.17. The annual expenditure per student for library purposes furnishes additional evidence of insufficient support. During the past decade, this figure remained between $50 and $60--a reduction, in effect, for both the prices of books and the salaries of librarians had risen sharply. It is significant to note that in 1960/61 the University of Toronto spent $137 per student for library purposes, Stanford $149, California $152, Cornell $154, and UCLA $160.

Williams Report

The University of British Columbia shares with her sister Canadian institutions the problem of inadequate library resources. Recognizing that a scarcity of library holdings is one of the limiting factors in the development of graduate study in Canada, the National Conference of Canadian Universities and Colleges invited Mr. Edwin E. Williams of Harvard University to survey Canadian library collections in the humanities and social sciences. Mr. Williams' findings and recommendations, published as Resources of Canadian University Libraries for Research in the Humanities and Social Sciences (Ottawa, 1962), deserve the careful reading of all concerned with higher education in Canada.

Mr. Williams presents his case simply and directly. University libraries in Canada are ill-equipped to support advanced research in the humanities and social sciences, except in a few subjects, notably Canadian. As Mr. Williams points out, "great universities and outstanding subject departments cannot confine their attention to a single nation, and there are few scholarly investigations that do not at least to some extent cross both national and subject boundaries." To those who argue that Canadian libraries are starting too late, Mr. Williams replies that "if the universities of California have not allowed a late start to deter them from spirited competition with their elders in the East, there surely is no reason why Canada should do less." The failure of Canadian universities to develop their libraries, Mr. Williams continues, "would demonstrate that Canada aspires to be no more than a dependency of other countries in graduate study and research in the humanities and social sciences." He concludes his report by stating that "Canadian universities, for the most part, are only beginning to face the cost of providing library resources genuinely adequate for advanced work in the humanities and social sciences. It will not be easy to advance on all fronts, neglecting neither the new research libraries that must be created nor the existing collections that ought to be improved; but books are the soundest long-term investment a university can make, and many of those that are acquired now may serve Canadian scholars for centuries."

The Year 1961/62

Last year the Library once again set new records in the provision of services; and, regrettably, once again the services answered a still smaller percentage of the need. A larger sum was expended on books than ever before, but more requests for book purchases went unfilled than in any previous year; more books were charged out to readers, but readers experienced more trouble in securing the books they needed; more reference questions were answered, but more faculty and students left the Library without the assistance they sought; more students used the Library, but seats were never more difficult to find. Progress which, at the end of each year, leaves the Library less adequate for its tasks is not good enough.

Growth of Collections.--Substantial additions were again made to the Library's book collections. $240,930 from all sources was expended for library materials--an increase of $11,046 over the previous year. Despite this larger expenditure, only 35,235 volumes were added--2,321 fewer than in 1960/61. At the end of the year, the Library contained 525,161 fully catalogued volumes, and many thousand government publications, maps, manuscripts, and other library materials.

As in past years, a significant portion of the Library's growth was the direct result of the interest and concern of its friends. Renewed grants for the purchase of books were received from Mrs. E. T. Rogers who created the Tucker Memorial Fund (historical cartography) in memory of her husband and the late Professor Norman Tucker.

H. R. MacMillan Foundation (forestry), Men's Canadian Club of Vancouver (Canadiana), Leon and Thea Koerner Foundation (French history), Otto Koerner Memorial Fund (art, music, theatre), F. W. Horner Ltd. (pharmacology), Institute of Chartered Accountants (accounting), and the Canadian Society of Radiological Technicians. The Library was also the fortunate recipient of several new grants: the Walter C. Koerner Slavonic Collection in Memory of Chancellor A. E. Grauer, the Frank De Bruyn Memorial Fund (general reading), and the Canada Council (Slavonic Studies).

Several significant collections of books were also received. The most notable acquisition of the year was the A. M. Donaldson Collection of Burnsiana, purchased by the Friends of the Library in honor of President and Mrs. N. A. M. MacKenzie. Other important gifts came to the Library from H. R. H. the Princess Royal (biography of Queen Mary by James Pope-Hennessy), Dr. H. R. MacMillan (rare books on voyages and natural history), Mr. Walter C. Koerner (humanities), Dr. W. C. Gibson (rare early medical works), Mr. and Mrs. Lester McLennon (books on Oxford and Cambridge University), and Mr. Harry Wearne (early works on natural history). Many of the Library's strengths are attributable to the generous benefactions of its friends in recent years.

Circulation Services.--The record use made of the Library during the past year was most encouraging. The circulation of library materials reached almost 600,000 volumes--an increase in one year of almost 25 per cent. Circulation in the College Library alone rose 89 per cent--from 78,760 to 148,732. Significant increases were also noted in other library services. The number of inter-library loan and photocopy transactions rose sharply. So, too, did the number of books sent to faculty members through the Campus Delivery Service--2,879 volumes--an increase of 40 per cent.

Toward the end of the year, the Circulation Division replaced its two-card system for charging out books with one employing a single edge-punched card. The advantage of the edge-punched card is that it can be coded and sorted into various groupings, thus enabling it to perform the tasks that required two cards under the former system.

Reference Services.--When the wing was added to the Library building two years ago, the Central Reference Department, which had served faculty and students long and well, was discontinued. Replacing it was a series of subject divisions--Social Sciences, Bio-Medicine, Sciences, Humanities, Fine Arts, and Asian Studies--which it was hoped would be better able to cope with the larger numbers of students and the increasing complexity of the academic program. If use is any index of success, the Divisions came into their own this past year. The Social Sciences Division, for example, reported that reference queries rose from 7,843 to 10,399--an increase of 33 per cent.

Technical Services.--The ordering, cataloguing, and binding of library materials proceeded under difficulty. Despite a maximum effort and a record performance, the backlog of uncompleted work grew during the year. Although arrearages of work anywhere within the Library are disturbing, they are particularly noticeable when they occur in the ordering and processing of materials. Orders for books requested by faculty do not get placed; the books students need for their courses do not get to the shelves; books awaiting cataloguing and binding are available on only a limited basis; and the task of the reference librarian, trying to bring user and book together, becomes more difficult. Improvement in one area of work can be reported. The addition of a professional librarian to the Pre-Bindery staff has cut in half the length of time materials sent to the Bindery are absent from the shelves.

Staff.--With the establishment of the School of Librarianship, professionally trained librarians are now available in the region. The quality of the first graduating class was excellent, and we can be assured that we shall have to compete with American libraries and with other Canadian institutions for the School's graduates. Our present beginning salary of $4,800 is lower than that offered by some Canadian libraries, and it is substantially lower than the average salary received by graduates of accredited American library schools last year--$5,365. The problem of retaining our professional staff once they have gained experience, is still very much with us. The salary schedule for senior librarians and for Division Heads is in need of substantial repair.

One of the Library's serious and long-standing problems is acquiring and retaining a good non-professional staff. Despite the best efforts of the Personnel Office and the Library, turnover among this group last year was 80 per cent. Non-professional employees make up two-thirds of our total staff and as long as most of them are inexperienced recruits, it will be difficult to maintain an acceptable level of public service.

RECOMMENDATIONS

In the coming months, the Senate Library Committee plans to give serious and extended thought to the needs of the Library during the next few years. Without further study, however, it is apparent that substantial sums both for graduate research and for the shoring up of existing services are needed immediately.

Books and Periodicals.---In building up its collections of books and periodicals, the Library is confronted with a double problem. It not only must acquire the currently published materials needed by faculty and students but it must also build up its files of older works which were not purchased at the time of their original publication. It is recommended that the Library's book fund be increased by $40,000, that the Graduate Studies Fund for the purchase of older materials be increased by $25,000, and that additional book monies be provided for the new Biomedical Library. Only part of this proposed increase is real. The devaluation of the Canadian dollar and the continued rise in the price of books have reduced the buying power of our book funds by about $20,000 during the past year.

Staff.---Repeated reference has been made to backlogs of work. The arrearages are rather evenly spread throughout the Library and little can be done to alleviate one without further aggravating the others. As a service unit, the Library unfortunately is unable to control its service load. We cannot limit the number of faculty and students who come to the Library, and we cannot restrict the number of reference questions they ask and the number of books they charge out. We can only spread ourselves more thinly and give increasingly unsatisfactory service, but to do this impedes the whole academic program of the University. Accordingly, it is recommended that substantial additions to the staff be made during the coming year.

It is also recommended that the beginning salary for librarians be raised to $5,200 and that comparable adjustments be made in the remainder of the professional salary schedule and throughout the clerical schedule.

Acknowledgements

Since the writer joined the Library staff a few months ago, many people have extended much needed assistance. My indebtedness to one individual, however, considerably predates my arrival on campus. During the longer and busier part of the year, Dr. Samuel Rothstein served ably both as University Librarian and as Director of the School of Librarianship. Although the man may have suffered, neither job did. Regrettably, the Library can no longer lay claim to Dr. Rothstein for its day to day operations; but as Honorary Associate Librarian, he is still available to us for counsel and support. Although the University of British Columbia does not need to be reminded by a new Librarian of Dr. Rothstein's many and significant contributions, I should like to express publicly my appreciation to him for the unique assistance he has provided during the past few months.

In the development of the Library, the University has incurred a similar debt to Dr. I. McT. Cowan. As a long-time member of the Senate Library Committee and as its Chairman for many years, he has vigorously and effectively supported the Library. He is now confronted with what must be for him a routine task--the breaking in of his fourth University Librarian.

Record should also be made of the contributions of Miss Anne Smith and Mr. Roland Lanning and their colleagues on the Library staff, of members of the University faculty and administrative staff, of the University Senate and Board of Governors, and, finally, of both a retiring and a new President.

Report Upon Library Divisions

Acquisitions Division. (Miss Eleanor Mercer)

Basic to any research library is the prompt and efficient acquisition of needed books and journals. The Division was hampered during the past year by insufficient funds and by an inexperienced and inadequate staff. Although monies for the purchase of materials rose by $11,046.18 to $240,930.38, the increment hardly covered the rise in the cost of books and, of course, did nothing for the expanding needs of our graduate and research programs. Requests for 33,756 book orders were verified (compared with 26,887 last year), 23,708 items were ordered (22,979), and 29,691 volumes were received (32,943). The staff was poorly equipped to handle this heavier work load. Librarians and library assistants with a broad knowledge of foreign languages, bibliographical sources, and the book trade are needed; needed, too, are clerical assistants familiar with the typing, filing and bookkeeping routines. These qualities are difficult to develop in a staff which experienced twelve resignations in fourteen positions during the past year.

Asian Studies. (Miss Tung King Ng)

The Asian Studies Division, created to process and service materials in the Asian languages, celebrated its first full year of operation with a record of 1,874 book orders placed, 1,007 received, 1,321 volumes catalogued, 1,317 volumes circulated, and checking files established for 663 Japanese government publications and 179 Chinese and Japanese periodicals. These significant accomplishments were realized despite rising book prices, cramped physical quarters, and inadequate staff. Prospects for 1962/63 are brighter, thanks to a $5,000 grant from the Canada Council, and a $400 donation from the proceeds of Far East Week.

Bindery. (Mr. Percy Fryer)

Since Mr. Fryer assumed direction of the Bindery some ten years ago, he has never failed to produce annual increases in output while holding the size of the staff constant. This amazing record was once again maintained. 12,876 volumes were given full binding, an increase of 814 over the previous year. Despite Mr. Fryer's best efforts, however, a backlog of binding is accumulating. We shall shortly either have to enlarge the area of the Bindery to permit the employment of additional personnel or introduce a second shift.

Biomedical Library. (Miss Doreen Fraser)

The Biomedical Library, serving faculty and students on the University campus and at the Branch in Vancouver General Hospital, experienced a notable year. In January the beginning of a new Dental School was announced. A month later the Association of Canadian Medical Colleges devoted a meeting to the problems of medical school libraries. From this came the appointment of a new Committee on Medical Science Libraries, its Brief to the Royal Commission on Health Services, and, finally, a survey of medical school libraries in Canada. In August, the firm decision was reached that the new Library would continue to encompass both the health sciences and the biological sciences. Finally, the building plans for the new Woodward Library were brought closer to completion.

In addition, the Biomedical Library assisted various groups preparing Briefs for submission to the Royal Society on Health Services, helped in the formation of the new Health Council, and aided in the establishment of the B. C. Medical Library Services on a permanent basis.

The day-to-day operation of the Library was marred by acute staffing problems arising from the lack of one librarian, ten clerical resignations, and a general shortage of staff.

Catalogue Division. (Mr. G. G. Turner)

The Catalogue Division catalogued and classified 36,099 volumes (41,147 last year), of which 10,122 were bound serials (10,423). Including volumes withdrawn, recatalogued, rebound and replaced, total production reached 43,949 volumes. The Division substantially completed the work, begun last year, of preparing a catalogue for the Special Collections Division, and made a small start on the cataloguing of the collection of the Institute of Pacific Relations. Even with the loss of a senior member of the professional staff at the end of last year, the backlog of unprocessed current receipts (3,403 volumes) increased by only 421 volumes. Additional professional staff are urgently needed to eliminate the backlog, to complete the cataloguing of the Murray and Institute of Pacific Relations collections, and to commence the cataloguing of the Burns collection.

Circulation Division. (Mr. Inglis Bell)

Total book circulation rose sharply--from 391,355 volumes in 1960/61 to 484,541 in 1961/62--an increase of almost twenty-five per cent. In an effort to cope with the expanded work load, the Division at the end of the year adopted a new circulation system employing edge-punched cards. It is hoped the new system will result in better service, increased efficiency, and the saving of approximately fifty staff hours per week.

The major problem facing the Division is the continuing large turnover of staff (87 per cent this year). No satisfactory level of public service can be achieved when the staff is composed largely of inexperienced recruits.

College Library. (Mrs. Eleanor Hoeg)

Established principally for the use of students in their first two years, the College Library is still engaged in building its basic book collections which will ultimately number from forty to fifty thousand volumes. Nevertheless, the Library made a remarkable showing in its second full year of operation. The collections grew by 5,921 volumes to 22,530; circulation almost doubled, rising from 78,760 in 1960/61 to 148,732 last year; and reference use of the collections increased correspondingly. Despite heavy duplication of the most used titles, it was still necessary to place over 1,100 volumes on reserve.

Curriculum Laboratory. (Mrs. Emily Woodward)

Students and staff will remember 1961/62 as the year of the double move--from the old Faculty Club to the basement of the Education building and thence to handsome and spacious quarters on the top floor of the new Education building. Despite the interruptions occasioned by these moves, the Curriculum Laboratory still reported an increase in the use of their materials. The collection of 14,462 textbooks, supplemented by 18,000 selected pictures, provided faculty and students in Education with 61,309 items needed in the preparation of lesson plans. Unsolved problems are staff shortages, book losses, and the cataloguing of supplementary textbooks.

Extension Library. (Miss Edith Stewart)

The Extension Library provides mailing service falling into three categories. Selected books of general reading are mailed, for an annual fee of two dollars, to people in the country without libraries or those who are physically unable to use existing library facilities. Plays and books on theatre are mailed to individuals and groups in any part of the Province who wish to read plays with a view to production. Required reading is mailed without charge to students registered in Credit Correspondence Courses. In addition to these, books are sent to anyone registered in non-credit evening or correspondence courses sponsored by the Extension Department. Reference questions are answered by telephone or mail only on anything pertaining to theatre or plays. One parcel of books is sent without charge to non members in the country requesting information on a specific subject. The Library is not to be used by students, faculty or staff with the one exception that students registered in theatre courses may use the plays, since the Extension Library contains a comprehensive collection of plays both classic and modern.

Fine Arts Room. (Miss Melva Dwyer)

The Fine Arts Room, serving faculty and students in art, architecture, music, and planning, experienced a heartening increase in the use of its materials. Circulation rose to 15,789 volumes, an increase of 2,354 over the previous year. The first master's degree candidates in Fine Arts and the first fourth-year Music students made heavy use of the research collections, as did the graduate students in City and Regional Planning. There was also a marked increase in the use of the collections by the expanded enrollments in the lower years of both Music and Fine Arts. The staff, because of sickness and inadequate numbers, was pressed to cope with the enlarged work load, and had to delay plans for expanded and improved services.

Humanities Division. (Mrs. Joan Selby)

In serving the needs of faculty and students in philosophy, history, literature, religion, and language, the Humanities Division last year answered more than 9,000 personal and telephone inquiries. The first publication to bear the Division's imprint was published in 1961--Reference Books in English Literature, Revised edition. This pamphlet is to be a required text in English 200. The Division also became responsible for selecting books in two of the important collections in the Library, that of Canadiana (both in English and French) and of Australiana. There was a considerable increase (39% over last year) in the number of interlibrary loans sent to other institutions. Faculty and graduate students of this university borrowed 898 items, 50 more than last year.

Science Division. (Miss Anna Leith)

The Science Division provides reference services to faculty and students in a variety of areas--mathematics, physics, chemistry, geology, engineering, botany, agriculture, forestry, and home economics. Because of the rapid rate of publication in many of these areas and the need for recent material, the staff concentrates upon keeping users informed of indexes, abstracts, bibliographies, and other available keys to the literature. At the same time, individual assistance is given to those expressing a need. During the past year special lectures were given to the students in agriculture, chemical engineering, mechanical engineering, home economics, and plant science. Special problems of the Division are inadequate work space and a shortage of staff to handle the almost overwhelming volume of serial publications.

Serials Division. (Mr. Roland Lanning)

As the unit responsible for the ordering, checking, binding, and completing of periodical files, the Serials Division plays a major role in the modern university library. During the past year, the Division received thousands of periodical issues, placed many new subscriptions, located and acquired a large number of periodical back files, checked hundreds of exchange lists, and prepared some 12,000 volumes for the bindery.

The size of the staff was not adequate for the task and, as a result, much work went undone. A bright spot was the addition of a librarian to the Pre-Bindery staff and the consequent speeding up of periodicals through the binding process,

Social Sciences Division. (Miss Joan O'Rourke)

The Division again supplied specialized reference service to students and faculty in the social sciences. The University's rapidly advancing graduate program in the social sciences was reflected in the work of the Division. Reference queries rose in a single year by one third, use of the microfilm collection increased sharply, and many more government publications and maps were consulted. In addition, service was provided for the first time for the new School of Librarianship. The Division was handicapped in performing its duties by space problems, the usual shortage of staff, and an ever-growing volume of processing work.

Special Collections Division. (Mr. Basil Stuart-Stubbs)

The Special Collections Division provides facilities for the preservation and use of rare and valuable books, manuscripts, and special collections. The strength of the collection, supplemented by over 250 titles this past year, lies in the field of pre-20th century Canadian history, travel and exploration. With the establishment of a collection of early maps relating to Canada another aspect of this general area was developed. A completely new field of specialization was created with the gift by the Friends of the Library of the A. M. Donaldson Burns Collection, honouring Dr. and Mr. N. A. M. MacKenzie. Locked faculty carrells, wherein items from the collections receive intensive use, have been in constant demand, attesting to the growing importance of the Division on this campus.
