A London Diary April 1695

- April 3 Sir William Parkyns and Sir John Friend, having been convicted of high treason, were drawn on a hurdle to Tyburn, and there were executed.
- April 9 A mob marched from the wrestling ring and plundered the house of the Provost Marshal of the Army in Holborn, setting at liberty men who had been pressed into military service against the French.
- April 12 John Gee, a street child aged 8, was found dead in a cellar, covered with hay. Bess Penn, a pick-pocket, later confessed that she had tied a handkerchief around his neck and pulled it until he was black in the face, because he would not part with six farthings.
- April 13 Parr and Cole, two notorious highwaymen, were committed to Newgate and later hanged.
- April 25 A reward of 5 pounds was offered for the capture of Robert Langley, an apprentice aged 25, who had left his master, taking with him a considerable sum of money.
- April 28 At the April sessions of the Old Bailey, six persons were sentenced to death, twelve to be burnt in the hand, four to be whipped, two to stand in the pillory, and seven to be fined only. One of the men sentenced to death by hanging was a pick-pocket who had stolen two guinea-pieces of gold.
- April 30 Opening night of Love For Love at the Lincoln's Inn Fields Theatre.

Three Notes On William Congreve

Samuel Johnson on William Congreve

But whatever objections may be made, either to his comic or tragic excellence, they are lost, at once, in a the blaze of admiration, when it is remembered that he had produced his plays before he had passed his thirtieth year; before other men, even such as are to shine in eminence, have passed their probation of literature. Among all the efforts of early genius which literary history records, I doubt whether any one can be produced that more surpasses the common limits of nature than the plays of Congreve.

William Hazlitt on William Congreve

His style is inimitable, nay perfect. It is the highest model of comic dialogue. Every sentence is replete with sense and satire, conveyed in the most pointed terms. Every page presents a shower of brilliant conceits, it is a tissue of epigrams in prose, is a new triumph of wit, a new conquest over dullness. There is a peculiar flavour in the very words. His comedy bears every mark of being a spirited copy taken off and carefully revised from the society of his time, exhibiting all the sprightliness, ease, and animation of familiar conversation, with the correctness of a finished composition.

Voltaire on William Congreve

The late Mr. Congreve raised the glory of comedy to a greater height than any other English writer before or since his time. He wrote only a few plays, but they are all excellent in their kind. They abound with characters all of which are shadowed with the utmost delicacy. He himself spoke of his works as of trifles that were beneath him; and hinted to me that I should visit him upon no other foot than that of a gentleman. I answered that had he been so unfortunate as to be a mere gentleman, I should never have come to see him.

Major Barbara
by George Bernard Shaw

directed by
Antony Holland

January 15 - 25
1986

Although hailed as the master philosopher of modern drama, for whom the stage was the battlefield of ideas and ideologies, Bernard Shaw's lasting merit undoubtedly lies in his near-perfect sense for effective theatre. Gifted with a fast and sure wit and an amazing power to create lively characters, his plays have earned him a secure place in the modern repertory. MAJOR BARBARA, first performed in 1905, has endured as one of his finest achievements. The encounter between a millionaire armaments manufacturer, his Salvation Army daughter and her fiance, a professor of Greek, makes for some splendid theatre, that is both thought-provoking and wonderfully funny.

EDWARD ALBEE'S
WHO'S AFRAID OF VIRGINIA WOOLF?

Hailed as a masterpiece of contemporary theatre when it first premiered almost 23 years ago, WHO'S AFRAID OF VIRGINIA WOOLF? has become a classic in our time. Albee's seering tale examines the thin line between truth and illusion and our use of both to survive our less than perfect lives. The Vancouver Playhouse is particularly pleased to announce that William Hutt will return to Vancouver to portray George opposite Janet Wright as Martha. WHO'S AFRAID OF VIRGINIA WOOLF? is sponsored by Grand Marnier.
