8.87 m. of textual records and other material.

Biographical Sketch

Patricia Dora Carney was born in Shanghai, China, on 26 May 1935 to parents Dora May Sanders and John James Carney. She had a twin brother named Jim and a younger sister, Nora. Carney's mother was born in Cape Town, South Africa and worked as a writer and journalist throughout much of her life. Her father was a World War I veteran and former teacher in British Columbia, ultimately settling in Shanghai, China, where he worked as a public health inspector and policeman for twenty years. In 1940, the Carney family relocated to Morrison, Ontario amidst the increasingly violent Japanese occupation of Shanghai. After Carney's father pursued a degree in veterinarian medicine at the age of 51, the family moved to Victoria, BC and once again to Nelson. The family would continue to move around the Kootenay Region and Okanagan Valley, with Carney and her siblings working on the family farm.

In 1960, Carney completed a B.A. in economics and political science at the University of British Columbia, where she also joined the student-run newspaper The Ubyyssey. Throughout the 1960s, Carney worked as an economic journalist writing weekly business columns for the The Province and the Vancouver Sun, the first woman to do so. In 1970, Carney and her brother Jim formed Gemini North, a company that provided consulting services on various issues concerning northern Canadian affairs. It was also at this time that Carney returned to UBC to complete an M.A. in Regional Planning.

In the late 1970s, Carney accepted the Progressive Conservative Party's offer to run as an MP for the riding of Vancouver Centre. In 1980, Carney formally began her political career when she accepted the Progressive Conservative Party's offer to run. She was first elected for Vancouver Centre in 1980 and then re-elected in 1984. In her first term, Carney served as the Official Oppositions Energy Critic. In September 1984, when the Progressive Conservatives formed the government under Prime Minister Brian Mulroney, Carney was sworn to the Queen's Privy Council when she was appointed Minister of Energy, Mines and Resources in Mulroney's Cabinet. In her capacity as Minister of Energy, Carney dismantled the Liberals National Energy Policy (NEP), replacing it with new Agreements. In Canada's Atlantic region, Carney constructed the Atlantic Accord. Simultaneously, in western Canada, the Conservative energy policy took the form of the Western Accord in which Carney instigated the Agreement on Natural Gas Markets and Prices. In June 1986, Carney was appointed Minister of International Trade and Minister Responsible for the Free Trade Agreement (FTA). During FTA negotiations with the United States, Carney worked closely with Simon

Reisman, Canada's chief negotiator, as well as Joe Clark, Michael Wilson, and other members of the Mulroney Cabinet. In April 1988, Carney was appointed President of the Treasury Board, serving a short term before a brief retirement from politics because of a severe arthritic condition. She returned to federal politics when Prime Minister Mulroney appointed her to the Senate on 30 August 1990. She was a member of the following Senate committees: Aboriginal Peoples; Fisheries; Energy, the Environment and Natural Resources; and Foreign Affairs.

Carney was awarded an Honorary Doctor of Laws from the University of British Columbia on 29 May 1990, and again from Simon Fraser University in 2010. She was an Adjunct Professor in the School of Community and Regional Planning at UBC from 1990-1999. Pat Carney retired from the Senate in March 2008 and lived on Saturna Island in the Gulf Islands off the Coast of BC where she was an honorary patron of the Saturna Heritage Committee. Carney passed away in Vancouver on July 25, 2023.
